Strike averted as Bonita teachers sign contract

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

Bonita school district teachers were in the classroom today after a threatened strike failed to materialize this morning when district teachers voted 191 to 28 to approve a two-vear contract with the district.

The vote effectively ends the 15-month long negotiation stalemate between the Bonita Unified School District serving San Dimas and La Verne and the approximately 270-member Bonita Unified Teachers Association (BUTA).

An atmosphere of relief at the end of negotiations and some dissatisfaction with the contract were evident at today's 6:30 a.m. meeting in the San Dimas Community Church where BUTA members voted on the proposed contract; the first the district has negotiated under the state collective bargaining law for teachers, the Rodda Act.

While details of the contract were not available because BUTA and district negotiators agreed to hold back information until ratification of the contract by the Bonita school board Wednesday evening, an informed source said the two-year contract calls for a 7.8 per cent pay increase over the district's 1975-76 pay schedule.

The contract also provides a 38 per cent increase in fringe benefits, not an outstanding increase when compared to other teacher contracts in the valley.

The agreement, which extends to June 30, 1979 calls for wage and fringe benefit reopeners from March 1 to April 1 next year with only five meetings allowed to be called in that period before an impasse is declared. This is becoming a standard tool in many teacher contracts.

Teachers did win two major victories in the contract. These were binding arbitration in the district's grievance procedure and a seniority clause in the district's involuntary transfer policy. Under the seniority system, all other things being equal, the teacher with the least seniority would be transferred on an involuntary basis.

The Bonita contract also includes summer school teachers, a provision not found in some other valley contracts.

One additional provision calls for a $146,000 sweetener added to the contract which will go to all those persons who taught in the district last year and are still there this year. The funds are to be divided equally between those persons and will amount to about $500 per teacher.

District Supt. James Johnson said this morning, "It's a good contract. I would have a hard time seeing how anyone could say it is not."

"I've often said the first contract comes the hardest, but I'm relieved it is over. We have all had to put in more than our fair share of time and energy on this."

Johnson credited the recent hard negotiations combined with additional state money for the new contract in reaching the settlement. He said the approximately $300,000 the district should receive from the passage of the state school finance bill is reflected in the contract.

"We are certainly happy we didn't have a strike and we are looking forward to a great school year," said Johnson.

While general relief prevailed, BUTA officials and members of the rank and file were not as ebullient.

Said BUTA Vice President Dick Gale, "The work of this organization is not over. Regardless of this vote, we still have other objectives. Over the past 15 months we have clarified where we stand as teachers in the eyes of the administration of the Bonita Unified School District."

Bonita High School teacher John Metcalf said, "I'll be happy to see the dispute come to an end," but added, "We could never get the full support needed for a strike."

Ramona Intermediate School teacher Mary Todd said, "I have mixed feelings about it (the contract). Our team worked so hard and they really didn't get what we should have had."

Dolores Gonzales, a first through third grade teacher at Grace Miller School and a 23-year veteran of the district said, "I'm very happy and very relieved. It was a long time coming. We showed a lot of togetherness and unity over the summer."

BUTA President Jay Leonard said he was very relieved but added that the organization would have a statement ready following the anticipated board ratification of the contract Wednesday evening.

"Everybody's happy," said Leonard.

Contradiction in Carter's statement on Lance hinted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter was fully briefed last December on the restrictions which had been placed on one of Budget Director Bert Lance's banks, a Senate committee was told today.

The testimony by Robert Bloom, first deputy comptroller of the currency, appeared to contradict Carter's statement Saturday that he knew of only one Lance financial difficulty before nominating his close friend.

The nomination was submitted to the Senate after Carter took office in January, although Carter had announced his intention to nominate Lance on Nov. 24.

Carter was asked the extent of his previous knowledge of Lance's financial difficulties while campaigning in Newark, N.J., for Gov. Brendan Byrne.

"The only thing I knew was that he had a problem in the 1974 campaign for governor of Georgia and it had been resolved," Carter said.

Asked if he knew of any other difficulties, he said, "No, I didn't."

Bloom told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee that on Dec. 1, after press inquiries concerning the existence of a so-called enforcement agreement at the Calhoun First National Bank in Calhoun, Ga., he suggested that Lance fully brief either Carter or his press secretary, Jody Powell, on the matter.

"Subsequent events confirm that Mr. Lance followed my advice," he said.

Earlier, a Justice Department spokesman confirmed that the criminal fraud division had received a comptroller's report which reportedly shows that Lance widely used bankowned aircraft for family and political purposes. But he said the referral was routine and did not necessarily mean prosecution was under consideration.

The enforcement agreement mentioned by Bloom called for the bank to discontinue allowing overdrafts to Lance, his wife and directors of the bank who were members of his wife's family. Lance was chairman of the board of the Calhoun bank.

The agreement was entered into in December 1975 and was lifted two days before Carter announced his intention to nominate Lance.

In an Internal Revenue Service investigative report issued last Friday, John Moore Jr., an Atlanta lawyer who was a member of President-elect Carter's transition team, is also quoted as saying Carter was briefed on the agreement.

Much flooding over Midwest

By The Associated Press

More than 100 persons were evacuated from a 20-block area of North Hastings, Neb., this morning as thunderstorm-spawned flash floods made life miserable in parts of Nebraska.

In North Hasting, flood waters entered at least 40 houses, and a nearby dam was being reinforced with sandbags.

Four inches of rain fell in one hour in Fairbury, Neb., Sunday night. Thundershowers stopped before daybreak, but were expected to resume today.

The Kansas City metropolitan area and parts of northwestern Missouri were also soaked by heavy rains from thunderstorms. Westwood, Kan., got almost six inches.

Flash flood warnings were in effect for parts of southern Nebraska,

Trying to reach Iceland

Balloonists will abort flight

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Two Americans attempting to cross the Atlantic in a balloon decided today to abort their troubled flight. Their ground crew said the two would attempt to reach Iceland, about 80 miles away, by nightfall.

At midmorning, a spokesman for the tracking station had said that radio contact had been lost and the balloon probably was down in 11-foot seas west of Iceland. However, before noon, he said the balloon was still airborne.

"The balloon doesn't have enough helium in it anymore," said Mike Leavitt. "If they stayed out tonight, the helium would cool off so much that they would be forced into the sea. They have thrown off all the ballast they can."

Leavitt said the U.S. Navy located the balloon 80 miles off the northwest corner of Iceland at midmorning. It had gained about 8,000 feet of altitude and pushed free of an air mass that had earlier kept the craft bobbing up and down above the sea.

The U.S. Air Force, in a dispatch from West Germany, said it had sent a rescue helicopter to the area. A spokesman in Washington said a patrol plane was following the balloon and had radio contact with the balloonists.

Air Force officials in Ramstein, West Germany, the European headquarters, said the crew members had reported they were running out of fuel.

The Air Force, which had an airplane from Iceland circling above the balloon, reported the men were wearing exposure suits and that the gondola was considered seaworthy.

Radio contact with the balloon had been lost Sunday afternoon, but was re-established early today.

Ben L. Abruzzo, 47, and Maxie L. Anderson, 44, lifted off just after sunset Friday from Marshfield, Mass., a coastal community south of Boston.

Hint U.S. moving toward PLO role in peace talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a further shift of its Middle East policy, is on the verge of asserting a need for Palestinian representation in Arab-Israeli peace talks.

The State Department will call soon for a Palestinian role at the Geneva conference the administration is trying to set up before the end of the year, sources said.

The move is being made despite the failure of the Palestinian Liberation Organization governing council to approve U.N. Security Council resolutions implicity recognizing Israel's right to exist.

The assertion that the Palestinians should be at the peace table would be made without specific reference to the PLO. At the same time, though, department officials are expected to again request that Yasir Arafat's organization support the U.N. resolutions, which also call for a peaceful settlement in the Middle East.

The administration move continues the process of cultivating the Palestinians, who President Carter has declared are entitled to a "homeland." This policy has caused anxiety in Israel and among its supporters. Israel considers the PLO, which is recognized by the Arab states as the sole representative of Palestinians, as a terrorist organization.

Earlier this summer, while touring the Middle East, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the PLO no longer needs to change its covenant, which is committed to the dismantling of the Jewish state, provided it approves the U.N. resolutions 242, adopted in 1967, and 338, in 1973. Even so, the council at a subsequent meeting in Damascus refused to implicity recognize Israel and accused the United States as being part of a Zionist conspiracy.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan is due here within the week with a proposed Israeli peace agreement with the Arab states. Prime Minister Menahem Begin's government repeatedly has barred any talks with the PLO, its offices or members, but said Palestinians from the West Bank of the Jordan River could be at the peace table.

Upland police seek parents of two boys left at market

Upland police are seeking the parents of two young boys, answering to the name of Joseph and Mark, who were apparently abandoned at the Alpha Beta Market at 829 W. Foothill Blvd. Sunday night.

Police said the boys, aged 4 and 6, told store employes their father had left them at the store after giving them $10. The boys said their father had not returned for them.

Officers said the boys were unable to give their last names. Officers waited at the store for some time, and when the father still did not return the children were taken to the police station.

The boys were given hamburgers and other treats by the officers. "They sure were hungry. They gobbled up those hamburgers," said one officer.

The boys were turned over to the Child Protective Agency in San Bernardino today, pending further investigation.

Rain damage near Brawley

BRAWLEY (AP) — A downpour of rain left California 78 closed today between Brawley and Palo Verde, where the deluge forced evacuation of 10 people from a trailer park.

Another 75 trailer residents refused to leave their homes.

Asphalt washed out two sections of the highway Sunday. Several mobile homes were damaged.

Four hospitalized, 11 arrested in demonstration over busing plan

CHICAGO (AP) — Eleven persons were arrested and four others hospitalized, three in serious condition, in a demonstration by whites opposed to a voluntary school busing plan.

Ten of those arrested in Sunday night's incident were whites and all the injured were white. The 10 whites were arrested on a variety of charges ranging from disorderly conduct to failure to obey a police officer's order to disperse, police said.

The injured were struck in two separate accidents involving cars trying to pass through a street crowded with the Southwest Side demonstrators.

Authorities said two teen-aged girls and one teen-aged boy were taken to Holy Cross Hospital where both were listed in serious conditions.

Michael V. Smith, 22, a black, was arrested and charged with reckless driving, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, driving without a city sticker and not having state license plates, police said.

The fourth victim, an unidentified man, was injured in a separate accident in which the driver was not held. He was listed in fair condition at Christ Community Hospital, authorities said.

Police estimated the number of demonstrators at 1,000.

Authorities tried to cut off vehicular traffic feeding into the demonstration area, but before barricades were completed, some cars got through. Cars driven by blacks were pelted with stones, according to police.

"Some blacks just got by my blockade before I cut traffic off," said District Police Commander William Woods.

"They were attacked by white youths."

The school busing plan that went into effect this year involves transfering children from crowded buildings to less crowded facilities.

GAO claims cost below estimates

NEW YORK (AP) — The General Accounting Office estimates that legislation requiring 9.5 per cent of imported oil to be transported here in U.S. ships could cost consumers more than five times the amount estimated by the Carter administration, the New York Times said today.

In a story from Washington, the newspaper said that in a 44-page report dated last Friday, the GAO estimates an added cost of between $550 million and $610 million annually, a figure much higher than one made by the administration in July.

The legislation, proposed by the administration and approved Aug. 2 by the House Merchant Marine Committee, has drawn fire from Republicans as benefiting special interest groups in the maritime industry at great cost to consumers.

The GAO arrived at the high cost to consumers by calculating that the bill would raise transport costs by 0.2 cents per gallon. If the U.S. imports eight billion barrels of oil a day, the added cost would be $240 million, the GAO said.

However, if oil imports reach the 10.3 billion barrel per day level predicted by the agency for 1983, the cost would be $300 million.

Those figures are further inflated by the GAO contention that the American consumer will have to pay more for domestic oil as its price adjusts to the world market price.

'Roots' picks up nine Emmys

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Roots" gathered up nine Emmys in an awards show that made up for a four-month delay by being the longest in the 29-year history of the Television Academy.

The 12-hour mini-series seen on ABC last January won Emmys for best limited series, directing and writing, with acting awards going to Louis Gossett Jr., Edward Asner and Olivia Cole. The three remaining Emmys for "Roots" were in craft categories.

The Sunday night Emmy Awards Show on NBC, delayed four months by a squabble that split the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences into an Eastern National Academy and a Hollywood Academy, ran a record 3½ hours. It was 40 minutes longer than the privious longest show last year.

"As long as we're running over, let's do it good," said Angie Dickinson, who was co-host with Robert Blake for the ceremonies at the stately Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

The Hollywood Academy handed out Emmys in 42 prime time categories, with 27 Emmys going to ABC, 21 to NBC, 17 to CBS and eight to PBS.

"Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," won seven awards and tied with "Sybil" for outstanding dramatic special.

"Sybil" won four awards, inculding an award to star Sally Field, who was named best actress in a drama special for her protrayal of a woman afflicted by multiple personalities.

Dick Van Dyke's variety series, "Van Dyke and Co.," canceled by NBC last year after 11 performances, won as best variety series. "The Barry Manilow Special" was named outstanding variety special.

"I'm a little angry at NBC for preempting us so many times," said Van Dyke. "We even got letters asking us if we were doing a special."

Ed Flanders was named outstanding lead actor in a dramatic special for his feisty portrayal of the president in "Harry S. Truman: Plain Speaking."

Beatrice Arthur, going into her sixth year as "Maude," won her first Emmy as best lead actress in a comedy series. Carroll O'Connor, whose Archie Bunker is Maude's conservative counterpart, was named best actor in a comedy series for "All in the Family."

The retiring "Mary Tyler Moore Show" bowed out after seven years by capturing the Emmy as best comedy series. Its writers also won award for her farewell performance, and the Academy paid a special tribute to the show in excerpts dating back to its beginning.

James Garner won an Emmy as best dramatic series actor for his private eye-on-wry in "The Rockford Files," and Lindsay Wagner as best actress in a dramatic series for "The Bionic Woman."

Once again, Britain's "Upstairs, Downstairs" walked away with the award for the best dramatic series.

Christopher Plummer, playing a corrupt banker in "The Money Changers," took the Emmy for best lead actor in a limited series. Patty Duke Astin won as best lead actress for "Captains and the Kings."

Burgess Meredith, who played lawyer Joseph Welsh, was named best supporting actor in a special for "Tail Gunner Joe" about Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Diana Hyland, who died of cancer this spring, was named outstanding supporting actress in a drama special for "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble." Her award was accepted in an emotional outpouring by John Travolta, her close friend who played her son in the movie.

Beulah Bondi won as best actress in a single appearance for a part on "The Waltons." Louis Gossett Jr. was named best actor for an appearance in a series for part two of "Roots."

Other "Roots" winners including Edward Asner as outstanding supporting actor in a single appearance in a series for the opening episode of "Roots." Olivia Cole won as best supporting actress in a single performance in a series for the eighth and final chapter of "Roots."

Chinatown task force organized

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Saying their city is living under an "atmosphere of fear" because of extended warfare among Chinese youth gangs, officials have formed a special task force assigned to break up the gang fighting.

The police action was announced Sunday after an early morning, execution-style slaying of a reputed gang member at his home in the usually peaceful Richmond District.

Authorities believe the dead youth and a critically wounded companion were shot to avenge last week's shootings at a Chinatown restaurant in which five persons were killed and 11 injured.

The latest shooting prompted Mayor George Moscone and Police Chief Charles Gain to announce organization of the 15-member gang squad.

At a news conference Sunday Moscone said, "There can be no greater crisis than this. The gangs have put this city under an atmosphere of fear."

Gain said the unit's job would be to identify gang members and adults believed responsible for gang activity. The unit will remain intact "for as long as necessary — and it may take years."

The city has offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those responsible for the Golden Dragon shooting, and $10,000 is being offered for Sunday's killing, Gain said.

Chinatown is where most of the gang-related extortion and gambling goes on, and where the majority of 44 other gang-related murders since 1969 have taken place, police said.

OPARC's new program begins today

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens initiated a new program today.

The Independent Living Skills Center for adults with developmental disabilities began this morning when the fall session of OPARC Day School opened.

Also resuming again is the Early Intervention Program.

The living skills center will offer vocational training under the auspices of the Baldy View Regional Occupation Program (ROP), according to Don Hardy, OPARC president.

OPARC is one of 27 agencies in the state which are participating in a pilot project which teaches highly complex tasks to the more profoundly disabled.

The vocational training will incorporate the techniques of the "California, or Marc Gold, Project." OPARC has been successful with the techniques and has tested them for a year prior to implementing them in the vocational classes for the new ROP program.

The curriculum will include work skills, discipline and job-seeking training.

For the past several years, Chaffey College, in cooperation with OPARC, has provided independent living skills training for adults with developmental disabilities at the OPARC Day School.

The students learn self-help care, nutrition and health, meal preparation, sensory motor and preceptual motor training, adaptive physical education, horticulture and domestic sciences and communication.

Hetty Doesburg, day school principal, has on her staff Mrs. Donna Gerard, Upland, Mrs. Sally Hall, Cucamonga, Mrs. Kari Buchholz, Claremont, Mrs. Lilah Beer, La Verne, and Richard Bartlebaugh, Pomona.

The Early Intervention Program is designed for the developmentally disabled infant. Mrs. Judy Cook is coordinator for the program which trains the infant from birth to 3 years old. The purpose is to provide prescriptive programs for each infant to encourage his development and to provide for the part support and guidance in becoming paraprofessional therapists for their child.

Two other programs are included in the OPARC school agenda this fall

The Senior Companion Program is a county-sponsored effort to utilize the time, talent and interest of senior citizens in working with developmentally disabled persons on a one-to-one basis.

Mrs. Ida Haag, Mrs. Ruby Wilson and Leonard Smiley, senior companions, provide tutorial programs, remedial subjects and other training.

The second special program will be art oriented, with a focus on pottery making, directed by Mrs. Mary Wegener and Mrs. Sonja Gage.

OPARC's services will continue to include Diversified Industries, a career center for the vocationally disabled, with Fred Larson as general manager.

The agency also provides an information and referral service for individuals or groups concerned with the vocationally and developmentally handicapped.

Deputy hit by rock in Cucamonga melee

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

A West End Sheriff's deputy was struck with a thrown rock and a sheriff's car was fired on in the Northtown section of Cucamonga Sunday night, resulting in the arrest of seven persons in a tense three-hour disturbance.

Injured in the incident that began about 8:30 p.m. on Center Street just north of 24th Street was Sgt. Michael O'Rourke. O'Rourke suffered a head injury requiring several stitches. He was treated at San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland and later released. Escaping injury in an fusilade of gunfire was Deputy "Andy" Anderson.

The attack on the two deputies brought immediate response from additional sheriff's deputies, the California Highway Patrol, and numerous officers from Upland, Chino, Ontario, and Montclair police departments.

Deputy Anderson, at the scene of the disturbance, said he and Sgt. O'Rourke were questioning three men in the area about a report of "shots being fired. All of a sudden I saw O'Rourke go down and heard gunfire. I heard bullets ricochetting all over the place. I didn't know what had happened — if O'Rourke had been shot or what. I called in a 999 (code for officer down, need assistance," said Anderson.

Within minutes, police and highway patrol units sealed off the area, setting up roadblocks in the area of 24th, 25th and Center streets. The arrival of the additional officers sent numerous persons on the street scrambling for their houses.

Capt. Monte Davis, West End sheriff's station commander, said during the first few minutes after the shots were fired, a highway patrol officer manning a roadblock on Center Street reported several persons in a white car ran the roadblock and had bumped him with the car. The white car was surrounded by shotgun-carrying officers. The driver and passengers were arrested.

Meanwhile, several other highway patrol officers on 24th Street west of Center Street reported being pelted by rocks and other objects. But no injuries were reported.

The San Bernardino Special Weapons and Training detail (S.W.A.T.) team was called to the area when it was believed those firing the shots at the officers were barricaded in a home on Center Street just south of 24th Street, said Davis. S.W.A.T. team members and deputies finally broke into the home when no one came outside on the orders of deputies. A search of the home found it empty. A second home and a shed were also searched without turning up any snipers.

About 11:30 p.m. the area was declared secure and the officers returned to the regular duties.

Arrested in the incident were Jerry Angel Hernandez, 18, of 9776 Main St., Cucamonga, suspicion of rioting, interfering with officers and disturbing the peace; David Lino Montoya, 18, of 8860 Center St., Cucamonga, suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon (car) on an officer; David Madrigal, 19, of Cucamonga, suspicion of being drunk in public; and four juveniles for other charges. Deputies said the juveniles were released to their parents.

Jewish New Year celebration starts

The valley's Jewish residents will begin celebrating Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, at sundown today.

Rosh Hashanah marks the start of the solemn High Holy Days, the 10-day holiday for world Jewry which ends at sundown Sept. 22. The blowing of the shofar, the ram's horn, signals the end of Yom Kippur on that evening.

Services will begin this evening at Temple Beth Israel in Pomona and Temple Shalom in Ontario. Beth Israel will have services at 8 p.m. today, and at 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Temple Shalom will hold services at 7 tonight, and at 9 a.m. both Tuesday and Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Jews in Israel were starting to observe the New Year with prayers and picnics today. Police were on stepped-up alert against terrorist attacks.

Armed guards were posted outside some synagogues and at the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem, Judaism's holiest shrine.

Thousands gathered at the Wailing Wall to usher in the year 5738. Judaism follows a lunar calendar that — according to tradition — is calculated from the creation of the world, through all the generations listed in the Old Testament.

About 10,000 synagogues, some only temporary structures, were prepared for an estimated one million worshippers. The turnout was unusually high, according to Rabbinical authorities.

The increased price of temple seats in Israel — $150 in Tel Aviv's major temples — reflected the inflation-ridden economy that will continue to plague Israelis in the coming year.

Banker's daughter kidnaped; two held

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A pretty 19-year-old banker's daughter, kidnaped four days before from her college campus, was driven to North Carolina on Sunday and released unhurt after a $158,000 ransom was paid. Within hours, authorities arrested a man and a woman.

Annette Adams, a blonde Vanderbilt University coed from Maryville, Tenn., was reunited with her parents at the Burke County sheriff's office in Morganton, N.C., 300 miles east of here, before dawn.

Authorities said they recovered more than $148,000.

Soon she was back in her home town where her father, W.C. Adams, is president of The Bank of Maryville.

Her face was puffy and her eyes red from crying, but she said she was all right.

"I was not hurt," she said. "I was well treated. They did not bother me. They never threatened to hurt me at all.

"They moved me around a lot. I was blindfolded most of the time but I could usually tell where I was by leaks in the blindfold and such.

"I'd never seen them before but I'd know them if they walked up to me now.

"I'm glad to be home," she said.

Then she broke into tears.

Authorities arrested Shelby Ann Baker, 28, of Winter Haven, Fla., and Wayne Edward Garrity, 29, of Statesville, N.C.

The FBI said they would be arraigned on federal kidnaping charges.

The drama began in Nashville on Thursday night, and it unfolded over four tense days during which news organizations kept the story off the air and out of print. The FBI had said Miss Adams' abductors had threatened to kill her if they saw or heard news accounts.

Authorities said a man and a woman forced Miss Adams into a car outside the Sigma Nu fraternity house on the campus of Vanderbilt University on Thursday night.

She was released at 4:15 a.m. EDT Sunday — 56 hours and 25 minutes later — in the parking lot of a motel on Interstate 40 at Morganton.

She called police and her father from the motel — collect — and Adams and his wife, Anne, flew to Morganton to pick her up.

Five hours after Miss Adams' release, the FBI arrested the two following a chase down Interstate 40.

Miss Adams had told police the car she was in was a light blue American sedan with Florida license plates, and soon Burke County, N.C., officers were chasing a car east on Interstate 40 as Catawba County, N.C., officers headed toward it from the other direction.

The car swerved across the median, hit a guardrail and two persons fled afoot into a wooded area.

Authorities said Miss Baker and Garrity stole a second car and another chase began, ending near Conover when the auto crashed into a dumpster in the parking lot of a motel 44 miles from Morganton.

After they were reunited in Morganton, the Adams family came home by car and talked to reporters in their driveway.

Adams said that his daughter, who is enrolled in Vanderbilt's college of arts and sciences, told him she and the kidnapers had been traveling since Sunday night and had stayed at three or four motels.

The Catawba County sheriff's office said $148,090 was recovered. There was no explanation of the $1,910 discrepancy between that figure and the amount paid.

Adams was at a banking seminar in Chicago when the kidnaping occurred, and did not learn of it until he returned home at about 4 p.m. Friday. Mrs. Adams had taken the first telephoned ransom demand that morning. She talked to her daughter then and again at 8 p.m. Saturday.

There were five calls Friday and several Saturday, and in that time the Adamses made four payoff drops at night. The first three were apparently tests, and the unmarked money was not taken until the fourth drop, just before midnight Saturday.

One drop Friday was at a trailer park where the parents were directed after reporting as ordered to a Knoxville bus station. Another that night and two Saturday night were in a dark area along a busy Knoxville street.

Federal agents watched each drop, sometimes using an airplane with sophisticated nightvision gear. But they missed the actual pickup.

Hal Hardin, U.S. attorney in Nashville, said four students on the sidewalk outside the fraternity had seen Miss Adams forced into the car. One jotted down the license number. Police found the car had been stolen from a shopping center and recovered it Sunday in Nashville.

A university spokeswoman said Miss Adams, a member of Chi Omega sorority, had left a party at the fraternity and was unescorted.

Back home, Adans said, "We are deeply grateful to the press and news media for containing this thing until we were able to get our daughter back. We are all tired and very thankful."

80 redcaps dropped from Amtrak line

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting Tuesday, rail travelers along Amtrak's Northeast corridor between Washington and Boston will have to haul their own bags.

In a cost-cutting move, the rail corporation is dropping its last 80 redcaps at 10 stations on the route.

However, elderly or handicapped passengers will be able to get help if they call Amtrak in advance, a spokesman said.

Eliminating redcap jobs should save the ailing, quasipublic rail corporation $1.4 million in salaries and benefits, he added.

The 80 redcaps are among 180 railroad workers losing their jobs in the cutback, at a total savings of $3.3 million.

The decision to eliminate redcap service was made very reluctantly last week, said Thomas Ramsey, Amtrak's manager of stations in the Northeast corridor. He said he originally wanted to hire four more redcaps — two in Washington and two in Philadelphia — in the coming fiscal year.

However, a $4.2 million cut in his $22.4 million budget request forced a choice between redcap service or ticket sales personnel along the nation's most heavily-traveled rail sector, he said.

"One of our attempts was to keep lines at ticket counters the same length they are now," said Ramsey. "More of our customers benefit from that than from our redcap service."

Amtrak requested a federal appropriation of $534.1 million for fiscal 1978, but got $488.5 million.

Amtrak has already announced plans to eliminate about 22 daily trains from the 120 operated in the Northeast corridor, to reduce turbo service between Chicago and Milwaukee and to cut the number of runs made by about seven long-distance trains. It also wants to raise ticket prices next month by 3 to 5 per cent.

Elimination of the redcap service along the corridor means an end to a tradition begun around 1896, when, according to the Association of American Railroads, the New York Central Railroad began free attendant service at Grand Central Station.

The redcaps, who were non-salaried before 1973 and earned a fee on each bag carried, now are paid $48.80 a day.

Walnut schools win restraining order

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Walnut Valley school district is one of 12 rural Southern California districts to have won a temporary restraining order Friday which holds up for 10 days the distribution of $47 million in federal economic development funds in Los Angeles and San Diego counties.

District Supt. David Brown said this morning, "That really made my day Friday when I learned that we had won the restraining order."

The order, issued by U.S. District Court Judge Manuel Real, will provide time for the districts involved to present their case to the court, stating the applications for funding were designed so they ultimately discriminated against small rural districts serving county unincorporated area residents.

The $47 million allocation made available through the federal Economic Development Administration is the same kind of funds acquired by the Chino school district a year ago to build two elementary schools.

To understand the suit filed by Walnut Valley, Rowland, Whittier and nine other districts, one must understand that school district administration in the East is somewhat different than in California, said Brown.

In the East, districts are usually incorporated with cities or townships with only one or two large county districts left to maintain schools in unincorporated areas.

When federal guidelines were drawn up to implement the new $4 billion economic development spending package, district's serving unincorporated areas were required to serve at least 50 per cent of the county's unincorporated population.

The 12 rural districts, said Brown, have filed their suit alleging that this is unlawful. They contend that the rural districts serving unincorporated areas of Los Angeles County should have the same right as districts such as Pomona to sit down with the county or city administration and prioritize needs for a combined grant application.

Earlier this year, the Pomona school board and city council negotiated a grant application to request funds for a school district cafeteria and and a new city fire station.

Brown says that, although the City of Walnut is too small for such an application negotiation, the Walnut Valley district should be able to sit down with the county administration and collectively negotiate and prioritize a grant application.

The county had earlier refused to do so, said Brown, who accused the county administration of "hiding behind the regulations."

The economic development grants were originally created to supply additional monies to cities and counties for public works improvements. Only in the last two years have school districts been able to apply for funds under the grant procedures.

The most recent $4 billion allotment of funds through the Carter Administration had supposedly been redesigned to make the funds more available to school districts, said Brown.

GM unveils Cadillacs

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors today unveiled a special edition of its 1978 Cadillac Seville which, pound for pound, could be the most expensive offering in the domestic car lineup.

The price of the new car, unveiled at a national press preview, was not disclosed although unofficial estimates put it at $16,000 or more.

The base Seville sold for $13,359 in the 1977-model year and was due for a sizable jump, as were other U.S. cars in the 1978 model run. GM has announced most 1978 prices will average 5.7 per cent or more than $400 higher than comparable 1977 models.

Cadillac showed off its seven-model line, including the DeVille, Fleetwood, Eldorado and Seville. The lineup had no major exterior or interior changes, except in the special edition.

The special edition will have full wire wheels, specially styled exterior mouldings, two-tone shades of brown or black, and a plush interior package featuring a writing desk, folddown arm rests, rear floor courtesy lamps and provisions for a tape-recorder or telephone.

Also for Seville, Cadillac engineers have developed an electronic spark selection control that automatically advances or retards engine spark as needed, resulting in highway fuel economy of about one mile per gallon, the company said.

Pomonan arrested in kidnaping and rape case

A young Pomona man was arrested Sunday afternoon in connection with the kidnaping and rape of a teen-age girl, and the robbery later of several members of her family.

The incident began Friday night at Montvue Park, located at San Bernardino Avenue and Cordova Street. Two men approached the victim and her boyfriend there, one pulled a pistol and robbed the boyfriend before forcing the girl to accompany them to another area of the park. There the victim was attacked.

The girl later was forced to drive her boyfriend's car containing the two men to her parents' home nearby. The two abductors proceeded to rob her mother, father and two sisters while one held the pistol to the girl's head. Before fleeing, one fired a shot into the living room floor.

An intensive search of the neighborhood that night failed to turn up any suspects, but Sunday Senior Patrolman R.M. Tefank, of the major crimes task force, spotted 19-year-old Melvin Carr, of 1900 W. Orange Grove Ave., in the Five Points area of the city and took him into custody. He was booked on suspicion of kidnaping, rape, armed robbery, and burglary.

Carr had been identified as a suspect through the use of photos shown the victims, according to Sgt. R.H. Hargett, task force leader.

Pomonan victim of gunshots

Gunshots killed Pomona murder victim Fred E. Liggett, 39, a coroner's autopsy revealed today.

Liggett, who lived at 405 W. 11th St., was found dead on the sidewalk near his home the night of Sept. 4. No arrests have been made.

Police were unable to determine immediately if Liggett had been shot or stabbed. There were several small puncture wounds about his neck. An autopsy performed by county coroner's physicians revealed that the wounds were made by bullets, however.

"Death was due to massive hemorrhage caused by bullets which perforated both lungs," coroner's investigator James Kono said today.

Police said they have been unable to determine a motive for the killing.

Three hurt in traffic

Three persons were injured slightly in Sunday traffic accidents in Pomona and one motorist was arrested on a hit-run charge.

In that accident, Hugo A. Pina, 25, of Pomona, was accused of driving away after his car ran into the rear of another auto at Grand and Park avenues Sunday evening. Pina also was charged with failing to possess a driver's license.

The other driver, Jose D. Perez-Godinez, 46, of Pomona, suffered a nose injury, but declined medical treatment.

Passenger Mary Matchison, 60, of Pomona, was hurt Sunday evening when a car driven by Joseph A. Matchison, 63, was involved in a collision at Mission Boulevard and the Corona Expressway. Matchison and the other driver involved, Sherry M. Levigne Sharp, 31, escaped injury.

O'Donnell rites

Day of the Boston wake gone forever

BOSTON (AP) — There's a bit of the Irish left, but the day of the grand Boston political wake is gone, forever.

"The wake . . . it's a disappearing phenomenon, like the derby hat," says Frank Skeffington in the novel, "The Last Hurrah," Edwin O'Connor's thinly disguised portrait of Boston's old Irish politicians.

It was a far cry from even "The Last Hurrah" Saturday and Sunday at McNamara's Funeral Home, across the road from Hannigan's Market and Minihane's Flower Shop.

There the relatives and the friends quietly paid their respects to Kenneth P. O'Donnell, White House appointments secretary to John F. Kennedy and one of the inner circle known in those days as the "Irish Mafia." O'Donnell died Friday at the age of 53.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will eulogize his brother's adviser today at a funeral mass.

The flavor of the old days, when wakes were held at home, the corpse in the front parlor, the Irish whisky in the back kitchen, was tantalizingly brief, as when Albert "Dapper" O'Neil, a Boston city councilor appeared in his powder blue suit with matching necktie.

"I can't thank you enough," said a political parishioner who moved over to pump Dapper's hand gratefully, "for that water meter you put in my cellar."

Dapper let the man walk away before he raised his bushy white eyebrows quizzically and said:

"I didn't know I put in his water meter."

In the old days, there would have been the governor and the mayor and, most certainly, the cardinal.

But not this time. Virtually none of the state's big-time politicians, other than Kennedy, appeared at the wake.

"Cushing would have come," said undertaker Robert R. McNamara about the late Richard Cardinal Cushing, the town's last Irish prelate. "But not this man. It's not the same."

Humberto Cardinal Medeiros came from Massachusetts' large Portuguese population. His relations with the Irish community are strained.

"Wake politics is ward politics," explained O'Donnell's White House sidekick, Dave Powers. "Kennedy was a national politician."

Another moment reminiscent of the past belonged to retired Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, 85, who paused before O'Donnell's body and then crossed the hall to shake hands with those at another wake.

"A doubleheader," said Power remembering the days when television and radio did not exist, and wakes were for quiet campaigning.

There was hardly a mention of Bert Lance, and the Washington of Georgian Jimmy Carter seemed far away from McNamara's. The hum of small talk and affectionate laughter colored the atmosphere with a party air, except for the stark presence in an American flag-draped coffin against the bank of flowers at one end of the room of the body of O'Donnell. A PT 109 pin clipped to his red-and-blue striped tie marked his identification to the last with Kennedy, the PT boat commander-hero whom he started to serve in 1946 during his first run for Congress.

For thirsty members of the crowd, there was hot coffee from the ice cream parlor next door. There was no food, as in the day of the parlor wake.

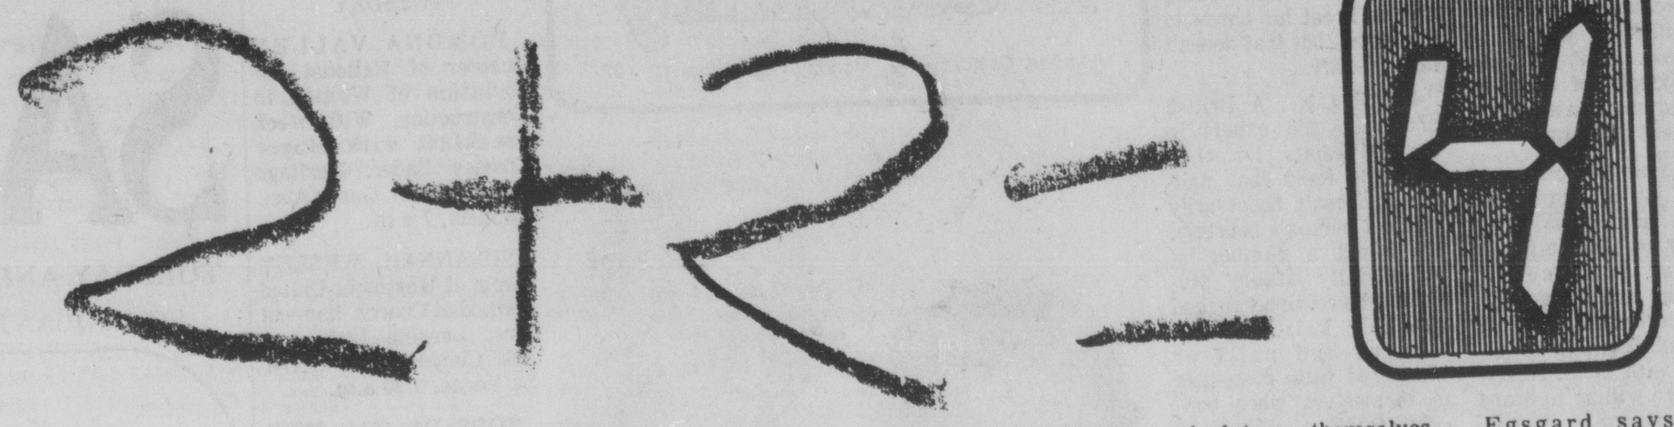
Classroom calculators: electronic wizardry is replacing simple skill



By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The pocket calculator has invaded the classroom, overcoming opposition from some parents and educators who fear that electronic wizardry will replace simple mathematical skill.

Retailers advertise — and parents buy — "Back to School" specials, not only for the college student, but for his younger brothers and sisters. Prices for the simpler models are under $10.

In a 1976 study for the National Science Foundation, Marilyn N. Suydam, director of a federally funded Calculator Information Center at Ohio State University, estimated that between 25 and 50 per cent of U.S. schools used calculators to some degree.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress, a project of the Education Commission of the States, will include a calculator section next year in its second, full-scale test of students' math skill at ages 9, 13 and 17.

"We have a whole test booklet using the calculator throughout," says Jane Armstrong, math coordinator for the testing group.

Using calculators was never even discussed when the group first tested math ability in a 1972-73 survey. But this year, math educators around the country said that calculators were a must.

The National Council of Teachers of Mathematics has endorsed the use of calculators in class. At what age level? Council President John C. Egsgard says, "We're only going to know by trying."

Egsgard and other teachers say children will need to learn fundamentals — addition, subtraction, multiplication, division — so they understand the principles involved. You need the basics to make the calculator do what you want it to.

At a higher level, says Egsgard, who teaches grades nine through 12, he still wants his students to learn how to find the square root of a number, using paper and pencil, so they understand the concept.

Youngsters who were turned off by the boredom of dozens of repetition problems may gain new interest in mathematical concepts and the uses of numbers. "People are going to enjoy math because the drudgery is gone," says one teacher.

Both the National Institute of Education and the National Science Foundation are considering proposals for research projects into new ways of using calculators. Such projects might include an exploration of whether a calculator can be used to help a child learn to count or whether computation of decimals can be introduced at an early age.

Miss Suydam says there have been about 20 studies of varying quality into the effects of calculators on children.

Most have centered on whether use of the calculator impairs the child's ability to understand such things as multiplication and addition, and Miss Suydam says most of the data "looks positive. The achievement level ieat least as good or better" as among children who have not been exposed to calculators.

The positive effect of calculators — whether they help children learn more — is unmeasured because their use in the classroom is too new for long-range studies. But, Miss Suydam says, "Some evidence is beginning to surface that ... you can use the calculator as the first step and then develop the meaning."

Some educators believe handheld calculators can be used as early as kindergarten to introduce children to numbers. Others would wait until junior high or high school. Still others would allow the use of a calculator only to check problems and eliminate routine computation; they would ban them from tests.

Almost all agree, however, that like it or not, there's no way to stop the calculators. "Even though you tell the kids not to use the calculator at school, they've got the things at home," says Egsgard. A survey last year by a market research firm showed that 43 per cent of American homes had a calculator and that the number is growing. Many families have more than one.

Industry sources estimate that 1977 sales of four-function personal calculators — the kind you use to balance your checkbook, figure your income tax or add up the grocery bill — will top $300 million. They say that by the end of this year, almost 73 million hand-held calculators will have been sold. If they all were still in use, that would come to about one calculator for every three Americans.

In her study, Miss Suydam wrote that as teachers and parents use calculators themselves, their reluctance to the use of computers in the classroom is likely to diminish.

Will children unfamiliar with calculators be at a disadvantage?

No, says Miss Armstrong of the National Assessment of Educational Progress. In preliminary trials this year for the agency's full-scale test in 1978, educators found that even students who had never used calculators before could handle them successfully after about five minutes of instruction.

Egsgard says the calculator can stimulate slow students because it gives them a chance to solve interesting problems, even if they still have trouble with basic arithmetic. Once they have regained interest in math, the students are more likely to be able to learn rudimentary skills. "There's nothing better than giving them something that will make them successful," he says.

Joyce Brothers
Sees problem ahead

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I'm a homosexual and have been living with the same man for 15 years. He's a brilliant teacher and will be moving to a university in the Midwest. I'm an artist and can work almost anywhere so I don't mind making the move with him. What troubles me is that as a native Midwesterner, I know that in that section of the country there's less tolerance toward sexual behavior that doesn't fit what's considered "normal." I've tried to warn my friend that he may have to go back into the closet if he wants to keep his job. He says I don't realize there have been changes in people's thinking in the past decade. He has more faith than I and I worry for him. — S.B.

DEAR S.B.: The results of a national opinion poll by Indiana University's Institute for Sex Research would tend to confirm your fears. There is still a tremendous fear and prejudice about homosexuality.

For instance, two-thirds of the 3,000 adults polled regarded homosexuality as "very obscene and vulgar." Thirty-four per cent would put homosexuals either in jail or on probation. Sixty-five per cent thought of them as sick and badly in need of a treatment program.

The vast majority endorsed job discrimination against homosexuals, especially in the clergy, in medical practice, in teaching, and in government service. About 80 per cent didn't want to associate with them. Nearly half were willing to brand homosexuality as "a corruption that can cuase the downfall of a civilization." Accordint to psychologists Eugene Levitt and Albert Klassen, Jr., who conducted the survey, they tended to be white residents of the Midwest or South.

Perhaps your friend should consider this information before making any firm decisions.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Our 16-year-old son seems to be a well-adjusted, healthy young man, but he worries us because he bites his nails when he's concentrating. He has almost no other bad habits. He doesn't smoke, drink or use drugs. He's a good student but very nervous. Should we worry about his nail-biting? I make fun of him telling him he'll eat his hands to the elbow, but that doesn't help. — C.N.

DEAR C.N.: A British professor and expert in nervous habits, Dr. D.G. Williams feels that nail-biting doesn't necessarily mean a person's neurotic. He found a number of emotionally stable students who routinely tugged at their hair, chewed fingers and nails or whispered little messages to themselves when concentrating.

Concentration of manipulation in head and hand regions suggests, he says, that activities are performed, at least partly, because of the feedback stimulation they provide. Men seem to be a bit more active in the squirming, biting habits the women, he noted.

Nail-biting in itself can't be regarded as a sign of emotional disturbance. However, a University of California study found that many nail-biters were filled with pent-up resentment and hostility resulting from inner tension.

I suggest you don't make fun of your son, but try to talk to him about why he does this. Ask if he's aware of any anger or resentment that he's bottling up. If he is, encourage him to talk it out.

Try to find out how he feels about failure. He may be repressing fears about this. Remind him that in order to develop new insights and new ideas one has to be willing to risk some failure. Failure often opens the door to new, innovative ideas. Make sure that you and your wife aren't applying too much pressure to achieve. Let him go at his own pace.

For medicinal purposes only

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beer, according to an Assyrian tablet of 2,000 B.C., was one of the foods that sustained passengers on the biblical Noah's legendary Ark.

The United States Brewers Association says the tablet is the first recorded mention of the brew, which has been credited with healing powers throughout history.

Saxons, according to the association, used beer, warmed and blended with medicinal roots, to cure hiccups. Syrians used beer to induce relaxation and Arabs used it in bread as a leavening agent. Today, the drink is part of a multitude of recipes of all kinds.

Tri-Community cities hunting a name

What's in a name?

Shakespeare's feeling on the subject notwithstanding, proponents of incorporating Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda are looking for a new name for that new city.

Although all three of the existing communities will keep their identities, say backers of the incorporation effort, an overall city name will be needed.

Voters in the November election will have only one name to choose from: Rancho Cucamonga.

But proponents of incorporation say it doesn't have to remain that.

To come up with alternatives, assuming voters want an alternative, the Tri-Community Incorporation Committee will sponsor a "Name Our New City Contest."

The move is not without precedent in the valley.

Montclair was incorporated in 1956 as Monte Vista. When it was later learned another Monte Vista, California already existed, voters selected Montclair as their city's name over Montevideo, La Vista, Orchard and San Antonio.

Jack Benny's famous line of "Azusa, Anaheim and Cucamonga" has been selected as the inspiration for contest prizes.

Among the prizes will be a day for four at Disneyland in Anaheim, or dinner for two at the Canyon Inn in Azusa. Contest sponsors said they will dream up other prizes, awards and honors as well.

Entries may be mailed to the committee at Box 321, Alta Loma, Cal. 91701, or they may be placed in a special box located at the county service building at 9161 Base Line Road.

Deadline for submission of entries is Oct. 1. Announcement of selected winning entries, which would be put before the voters at a later date, will be made in mid-October.

Each entry should include the individual's name, address and phone.

Home builders' council planning fun day

The Yorba Linda Country Club, 19400 E. Mountain View, here, will be the site of the Home Builders Council of the Building Industry Association of California Annual Summer Golf Tournament and Golf Banquet. The date of the annual fun day is Sept. 26.

Again this year golfers will be vying for trophies, hole prizes and door prizes. The HBC golf committee reports that in excess of $1,500 will be spent for door prizes which will include golf equipment and other related prizes. In addition to the prizes, there will be many surprises for the serious golfer as well as the duffer.

The tournament is scheduled for a noon "shotgun" start with old Quaker paints supplying golf balls to all registrants. Reliable Lumber Company is sponsoring free use of range balls for early arrivals. Registration will begin at 10.

Biddle Development, Inc. will provide sandwiches and liquid refreshments on the course will be provided by Saddleback Roofing and Saddleback Insulation. Trophies for the best golfers in the three flights are being donated by John Wilson Framing.

Laboratory achieves new highs

Data-Design Laboratories in Cucamonga achieved new highs in sales and earnings in fiscal 1977, exceeding the previous records set last year, said Thomas C. Beiseker, president and chief executive officer.

He said that sales and net income in the fourth quarter also established new quarterly highs and were slightly ahead of last year's record final quarter.

For the year ended June 30, sales increased 12 per cent to $25,357,000 from $22,700,000 in the prior fiscal year. Net income was up 17 per cent to $964,000, equal to 89 cents per common share from $825,000 or 80 cents a share last year.

Fourth quarter sales totaled $7,484,000, compared with $7,383,000, and net income was $445,000 versus $435,000 one year ago.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, plagued by investor fears of higher interest rates, headed sharply lower along a broad front Monday. Trading was moderately active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which plunged 11.09 points Friday, was off 4.24 points to 852.83 shortly before noon EDT. The closely watched average fell 15.24 points overall last week.

Analysts said the early selling was a continuation of Friday's rout that was sparked by Federal Reserve Board credit tightening in light of a surprising $3 billion jump in the nation's basic money supply.

The money supply has surged at an inflationary rate the past four months, forcing the Fed to take credit tightening steps. This could force short-term interest rates higher and hinder the economy, which already has slowed won.

As a result, declines outnumbered advances, 765 to 361, among the 1,613 issues crossing the tape.

New York Stock Exchange volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 8,000,000 shares, compared with 8,640,000 traded during the corresponding period Friday.

International Telephone & Telegraph was the most active NYSE issue, off 7/8 to 30 3/8. ITT preferred N stock followed, off 5/8 to 38 1/8. Brunswick Corp. was the third most active NYSE issue, off 5/8 to 12 5/8.

Mattel was off 5/8 after the company reported second-quarter operating earnings of 24 cents a share, compared with 25 cents a year ago.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. International Systems & Controls, which Friday said it was paring operations to concentrate on its marketing capabilities and to reduce overhead, was ahead 1 1/4 in active trading.

Store sales rise 10.1% in August

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc. (NYSE) reported sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 27 were $101.7 million, an increase of 10.1 per cent over the $92.4 million of August 1976.

Sales for the first seven months of fiscal 1977 were $734.4 million, an increase of 7.6 per cent over the $682.6 million for the like period of 1976.

Philip M. Hawley, president, said that early consumer response to fall fashions, as reflected in the August sales, was very encouraging. There has been a strong consumer interest in women's dresses and skirts.

Brisk sales were reported in women's fashion accessories, including shoes, Hawley said. There was continued strength in goods for the home, particularly textiles for the bedroom and bath.

The company is a major retailer of apparel, accessories, home furnishings, books and gifts through general and specialty department stores, book stores and mail order catalogs.

JOSEPH J. JACOBS

Jacobs' role at college honored

Harvey Mudd College honors two of its friends, a trustee and his wife, who are major donors to the college's current Campaign/25, by dedicating a building in their name on Tuesday.

The persons being publicly recognized are Joseph J. Jacobs, chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer of Jacobs Engineering Group Inc., Pasadena, and his wife, Violet Jacobs.

The building is the college's first laboratory building, completed in 1961, which has since been completely renovated and refurbished. It now becomes the Jacobs Science Center.

Jacobs, an engineer who founded a worldwide firm of designers, consultants, engineers, and constructors, and Mrs. Jacobs, became interested in the college of engineering and science at Claremont in the early 1970s.

They established a scholarship fund in 1972 and have contributed to it since. In 1973 Jacobs was made a trustee of the college.

When Campaign/25 was launched in the spring of 1976, the Jacobs were among the first of major donors. That support takes many forms, $1 million in endowment, continued scholarship aid, and checks and pledges to match campaign contributions made by alumni, faculty, and staff.

The informal ceremony honoring Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs will include participants Henry T. Mudd, chairman of the board; D. Kenneth Baker, president; and Joseph M. Burkholder of the class of 1978, student body president. Following the exercises there will be a reception and luncheon for invited guests at the president's house.

Bank develops new system

LOS ANGELES — Bank of America's corporate agency division announced the development of a new computerized bond coupon processing system to expedite principal and interest payments to bondholders.

The system is designed primarily for medium-size and large corporations and municipalities that name the bank as paying agent for bearer securities, such as corporate and municipal bonds and coupons.

"The primary purpose of the system," said Nicholas J. Caputo, vice president and head of the division, "is to make payment more promptly on bonds and coupons as they are submitted."

Caputo said the bank handles payments for nearly five million bonds and coupons annually or an average of approximately 20,000 per working day. "Automation is vital to maintaining our present customer base as well as expanding it," he said.

CONTROVERSY ENDS

Beauty wins over bureaucracy in Claremont City Hall battle

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Staff Writer

Claremont's classic combat between sculpture and City Hall is apparently over with beauty winning over bureaucracy.

Folk music store owner Charles Chase, who adorns his 12th Street home lawn with vertical and horizontal wood sculpture and logs, has been the center of a controversy for three months.

After two anonymous complaints from neighbors were received at City Hall, Gary Richards, community development enforcement officer, declared that natural logs and sculpted logs that Chase had sat upright on his front lawn were sculpture.

But, according to Richards, those debarked logs placed horizontally on the lawn were not and would have to go.

Chase refused to move them, declaring that 90 degrees from the vertical does not mean a naturally sculpted piece of wood is not sculpture.

More forceful letters were received by Chase from City Hall. The last letter demanded the logs be removed or legal action would follow.

Chase not only failed to comply, but picketed City Hall in retalitation. He charged the city was biased against sculptors.

A hiatus of more than a month was taken by both sides, as each marshaled forces.

Finally, a compromise was reached between Chase and city officials. If Chase could obtain a letter from another artist stating the logs laying horizontally in his yard were art the city would back off, said officials.

Mike Hill, an artist and artisan who works in stained glass and operates Crystals in Glass in Claremont Village, provided such a letter.

In a letter received at City Hall, Hill stated:

"Having worked extensively in wood gives me a deep appreciation of Mr. Chase's log sculptures. They seem to be a direct expression of the artist's love of natural forms and materials. They make a simple yet powerful statement. Why would it be necessary to alter further these logs to qualify them as sculpture?

"You could categorize these works as being Minimalist in form, however, I prefer to simply call them ART!"

Also aiding Chase's cause was a 14-year-old neighborhood boy who obtained a score of signatures on a petition which stated Chase's logs were looked at by most neighbors as art.

Chase, who chastized the city for not displaying sculpture on public property, said he now feels vindicated.

Due to recent storm

Valley hit by outbreak of fleas

The valley has dried out from Hurricane Doreen which passed through three weeks ago. And along with the dryout has come a flyout of fleas.

Several valley veterinarians report they have seen a huge increase in canine and feline reactions to flea bites, mainly among older cats and dogs.

The storm's moisture has caused dormant flea eggs to hatch. One Claremont veterinarian likened the infestation to another last September when an unseasonal rain caused a similar hatching of eggs. Last year's outbreak was worse than this year's, he said.

Older cats and dogs especially are more susceptible to fleas because they build up an allergy to bites. "One bite can trigger a reaction which makes them itch all over," the veterinarian said. "Flea saliva is the culprit," he said.

To combat the new outbreak of fleas, a three-pronged attack is necessary, he said. The yard must be sprayed to kill fleas in the lawn, the home and furniture thoroughly vacuumed and possibly fumigated, and the dog or cat liberally doused with either flea powder or spray, he said. Commercial dips are available and home fogging spray cans are on sale at nurseries, he said.

Profile: Chino's Santo still looking for answers

DAN SANTO

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Dan Santo is fighting hard these days to get inside an "octopus."

The "octopus" he's referring to is the Chino Unified School District.

Santo, a new school board member elected last March, has found it difficult to get answers to his questions about the district. He sometimes feels like he's wading through a mass of tentacles.

The brash, extroverted Santo who often livens up a school board meeting, said in a recent interview that problems with obtaining information has been the "biggest surprise" for him since he joined the board.

"I'm amazed at the amount of information people don't receive about education," he said. "Educators are a very closed society — it's like beating yourself against the wall to get information."

Santo indicates that if a school board member like himself has problems getting answers, then imagine what the average district resident has to go through.

The educational system has "defense mechanisms," he said. "They resist change. It's a closed situation — there's an ivory tower up there."

Santo, 39, says he has discovered there is a "a lot going on. I'm not saying there's any hanky panky or wrongdoing — but there are things they (educators) don't think of telling you."

For example, Santo said, administrators "toss a budget at you and say, 'Here, pass it.' "

(Chino schools Supt. Duane Stiff, asked to respond to Santo's statements, said he "had no intention of commenting on the remarks. I don't know what he's referring to. I don't know what he means by those statements.")

Santo promises to "shake up" the bureaucracy during his tenure on the board. "We have to take the cobwebs out. I feel it's something that has to be looked at — in fact, it needs a kick in the pants."

Despite the problems he's encountered, Santo enjoys being a board member. "The animal (the district) is very complex but I enjoy it."

Santo, a newcomer to Chino who has only lived in the district for 20 months, has always been a "joiner" and ran for the school board after his children became involved in school programs such as Future Farmers of America.

A contract negotiator for Teledyne-Inet in Gardena, Santo said he was interested in "what kind of school programs were being offered" and decided to run for the board.

Santo became part of a pro year-round school slate, and says he still favors the controversial program. He believes he was elected because "people wanted some new blood" on the board and he excelled at the candidate forums.

Santo emphasized a "constructive approach" to solving educational problems and claimed he wanted to be part of a "can do" board.

The district was in the midst of a heated controversy over year-round school, and Santo's election tipped the balance in favor of those wanting to keep the YRS program.

"I'm still a proponent of YRS," he says. "I like the continuity in education, and the fact buildings are not standing empty for three months."

The YRS issue has become somewhat defused in recent months, but Santo has been involved in discussions of other important issues — such as the selection of a new superintendent and the teachers' contract.

He tends to liven up serious discussions at school board meetings. "I'm not a quiet person," he says, "and that's probably the understatement of the year."

"Whatever I do, I attack it. I get into things wholeheartedly."

He prides himself on his quick delivery of "one-liners." He says it's easier to communicate that way — "you don't have to be super serious about everything."

Santo claims he is not putting on a show or trying to be a "smart Alec. It's just my way of communicating."

He admits that he likes to "deflate pomposity" during serious proceedings.

He recently commented that he felt like he'd been to the "Mad Hatter's Tea Party" after viewing a constantly changing school budget.

Santo once hinted that school documents should be kept simple. "K.I.S.S. should be the byword — keep it simple, stupid."

Government is just too rigid, he said. "It must be brought closer to the people."

And that's what Dan Santo will be trying to accomplish in the coming months.

Schulte selected Valencia principal

Roger J. Schulte has been named as the new principal of Valencia Elementary School in Upland, replacing Dick Riley.

The Upland school board confirmed the appointment of Schulte at a recent meeting. He has been serving as an acting principal in the Moraga School District in Northern California.

Schulte's appointment completes a number of reassignments of principals. Riley was reassigned as principal at Pioneer Junior High School, leaving the opening at Valencia.

Schulte, 33, who had also served as an assistant principal and English teacher in the Moraga district, holds a bachelor's degree from UC Davis and a master's from Stanford.

He is married and has two children.

Immunization idea: gifts for children

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

In a concentrated effort to assure that all children entering school for the first time are immunized, the Pomona Health Center will have gifts for the youngsters at an evening clinic scheduled Wednesday.

Free drinking cups will be given to each child receiving immunizations for polio, measles, diphtheria, tetanus, rubella, pertussis and mumps at the Pomona center of the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, 750 S. Park Ave., from 5 to 7 p.m.

The cups, donated by a local firm, are heavy plastic designed with Disney characters and come in four colors.

Another free clinic, slated on Oct. 12, from 5 to 7 p.m., will also include the cup offer.

All children enrolling in schools in California for the first time this year must present evidence of immunization against polio, measles, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

The only children who are exempt are those whose parents have filed signed doctors' statements that immunization is not medically recommended or that immunization is against the parents personal beliefs.

Children who cannot produce evidence of immunizations may be enrolled only on a conditional basis. Immunizations are being offered at all public health clinics this month and can also be obtained at the family's personal physician.

In recent years, the percentage of children immunized against preventable childhood diseases has been declining. This decline was blamed for a serious epidemic of measles in the Southland during the past school year.

Dr. William H. Foege, director of the Center for Disease Control, said recently that the drop in childhood diseases that followed the introduction of vaccines resulted in a fading of interest in vaccinations.

The county health department will conduct spot checks at schools this autumn to see that all districts are complying with the department's immunization requirements.

Children must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian. All previous immunization records should be brought to the clinic for review by the staff.

Additional information, including instructions in Spanish, are available by calling 623-6811, ext. 528.

Most valley students begin school today

Most of the valley's 100,000 public school students returned to classes this morning for another year.

Bonita, Chaffey, Claremont, Alta Loma, Upland, Central, Walnut and Ontario-Montclair school districts opened their classroom doors to students today.

Chino, a district on the year-round school system, started classes on July 1 for elementary and junior high students. High school students, however, returned today.

Students in the Pomona Unified School District will not start school until Wednesday because of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, which begins tonight.

Carport damaged by $1,000 blaze

The cause of a fire which caused $1,000 damage to an apartment carport Saturday noon is under investigation today by Pomona Fire Department inspectors.

The fire, of incendiary nature, was at the apartment complex owned and managed by John Williams, 1900 W. Orange Grove Ave., Pomona.

The carport was empty at the time.

Cal Poly's May honored

"I felt some skepticism when I walked out onto the floor, but feel that I did prove my ability to referee to everyone's satisfaction," Darlene May recalls.

Miss May is the first woman to ever referee in an international basketball contest. She served as an official during the recent World University Games in Sofia, Bulgaria.

Not only did Miss May referee several women's international games, she was the official at a game between men's teams from France and Italy on Aug. 26.

The assistant athletic director and head coach for women's basketball and softball teams at Cal Poly Pomona, Miss May was recently presented a trophy by the Cal Poly Associates in recognition of the attention she has focused on the university.

She was licensed by the International Federation of Basketball Associations two years ago, the first woman to be so recognized.

Miss May has twice officiated at the finals of the U.S. Women's Collegiate Tournament and referred all five contests played by the People's Republic of China women's team during a U.S. tour in 1975.

While she enjoyed the opportunity to referee at six games in Bulgaria during the August competition, Miss May said she is glad to be back in the United States.

"But I think I've proved to the rest of the world that American women are capable of officiating in these tournaments in the future."

Neighborhoods come first

There is a new wave of thinking about urban problems — which shouldn't be too surprising since the old ideas left us in the mess we find in cities like New York, Detroit and Cleveland.

All of us know the signs of urban trouble: ghost towns downtown, thriving suburbs, decaying inner city neighborhoods, poisonous big city taxes, city budgets strapped and teetering on the edges of bankruptcy.

The old thinking went this way: What inner cities need most is more tax money so the wise city fathers can gather it to spend on city aging problems that we call crime, broken down public facilities, rising welfare costs and slums. So bring in business and industry for more valuable property to tax.

The easiest way is to boost downtown and the old theory maintains that if downtown is a snappy and attractive place, then people will want to live in the big city neighborhoods, there'll be money to pay for the poor and thus the rest of the city will take care of itself.

So it's malls and mini-parks and parking lots and downtown slum removal and parking structures and slabby high rises and underground parking garages. And pretty soon we're left with acres of asphalt and canyons of high rises and skid rows that, like blobs of mercury when you touch them, just move on to destroy another neighborhood.

The new wave is the opposite — neighborhoods first and the downtown second. Take care of the neighborhoods and you have a stable, attractive city with happy people and that keeps costs down, tax base high and draws business like a magnet.

These are not either-or views. But most city councils across the nation can be broken down in terms of which side of the argument they support. The old theory has been in vogue for many years and the new theory is gaining political muscle.

This new strength grows from at least three forces:

— The death throes of economies of scale. The old idea was that if you had more customers, you could do things cheaper for all concerned. It is true up to a point. That point is where things begin to get hideously expensive.

Inner cities pushed for metro-area solutions when it didn't cost too much. But a new nuclear economy-of-scale power plant is now over a billion dollars. Power rates are galloping upward. The costs for them are spread across a metro area or even a state, with the inner city (which already has lines up and power plants working) picking up an enormous amount of the tab so that growth can take place in the suburbs and out-state.

The inner cities are beginning to view themselves as being ripped off so that a thousand suburbs may bloom. This encourages city residents to band together and fight.

—Populism. It is beginning to rouse its shaggy head again with suspicion of big government and big business, a belief in the honesty, good sense and ability of the common man and an attempt to regain control over faceless bureaucracies. It is a sense of throwing us into the arms of the people and tearing us away from the arms of the experts.

— The energy crisis. In the years ahead, living in cities looks like it may be less expensive than in the high cost, energy-dependent suburbs.

Any city politician who stops to think more than five minutes about all this recognizes the key point: People who vote live in the neighborhoods and not on downtown parking lots.

Many city residents feel they cannot go on leaving the future in the hands of the professionals downtown, considering the way the urban ball has been fumbled.

Brown dodges tough questions

Because he hasn't come flat out and said so, don't harbor the notion that Gov. Jerry Brown has not decided on whether to run for re-election. On the contrary, he's running and running hard.

While he's flitting around the state, participating in staged media events, the governor appears to be satisfying inquiries from local press representatives.

But Gov. Brown is dodging the capitol press corps. They are the reporters who are more familiar with the issues, they know how our political world works, and they know what and when to ask the hard questions.

Not since last Feb. 3, when Gov. Brown held his last formal news conference in Sacramento, have the capitol reporters had a chance to ask the governor the tough questions. It's very difficult for them to ask penetrating questions when they have to catch the governor on the run in a hallway or an elevator.

When Jerry Brown ran for governor he promised openness in government. He's failed in that respect, miserably, just as he has faulted on finding solutions to the many problems facing California and its 20 million residents.

Using the 'big lie'

Dear Editor:

The opponents of the Panama Canal Treaty are just playing politics with this treaty. They have taken to using the "Big Lie" just as Joe McCarthy did, in order to drum up support for their position. They use highly emotional arguments but they don't tell the truth.

They don't tell that U.S. ships will continue to have access to the canal to the same extent they do now. They skip over the fact that the U.S. will have the right to defend the canal forever according to the treaty. No mention is made that the rejection of the treaty could lead to a war like Vietnam.

Men like Reagan who lust for power, and a segregationist like Strom Thurmond, with such groups as the Birchers, the KKK and a host of what can only be called "fascists" are not very credible. Should we not heed the voices of both Presidents Ford and Carter instead? If we don't the alternative is sickening.

The Letelier murder case

WASHINGTON — The man behind the murder of Chilean exile leader Orlando Letelier, as federal investigators have pieced together the mystery, is probably Chile's shadowy secret police chief, Manuel Contreras Sepulveda.

In one of the most complicated investigations since Watergate, FBI sleuths have traced the man who ordered the killing to Contreras' office in Santiago, Chile. They are not yet certain, however, whether Contreras himself gave the order or whether it came from a top aide.

Most federal sources believe the murder could not have been carried out without Contreras' direct approval. In fact, some Justice Dept. sources speculate that Chilean President Augusto Pinochet himself personally suggested the assassination.

No one working on the case will comment directly. But we have learned that the FBI has stepped up its activity among terrorists in Miami and hopes to resolve the case in the near future, complete with the names of the actual assassins.

Letelier was killed by a bomb, which was attached beneath his Chevrolet. The bomb exploded last September 21 as he was driving down Washington's tranquil Embassy Row with two American colleagues, Mike and Ronnie Moffitt.

The blast killed Letelier and Mrs. Moffitt but miraculously spared her husband. Afterward, an anguished Mike Moffitt begged us to investigate the bombing. We have kept in close touch, therefore, with the federal investigation.

Within a few weeks, we were able to identify Chile's notorious secret police, known by the dread initials DINA, as the probable culprits. Now we can describe the murder plot.

We are told that Pinochet expressed his displeasure with Letelier to the DINA chief. We have reason to believe that Contreras, in response to the Chilean president's wishes, dispatched a DINA officer to the United States to meet with two leaders of Brigade 2506, an organization of Bay of Pigs veterans.

Some members of the brigade, trained in violence by the CIA, allegedly have become right-wing terrorists. The DINA agent was put in touch with them, according to our sources, by a Chilean diplomat in the United States, who secretly works for DINA.

We reached the diplomat who reportedly has been interrogated by U.S. authorities. At first, he told us through an interpretor that the affair was his "private problem." Then he refused to comment; then his aide told us the charge was "ridiculous."

Investigators tell us, however, the two brigade leaders contacted among others a Cuban demolitions expert, Guillermo Novo, in New Jersey. At the time, he was on probation after conviction for illegal use of explosives. He violated his probation and is now a fugitive.

The assassination plot was worked out, our sources say, at a secret rendezvous near Bonao in the Dominican Republic. It was decided that a special shaped plastic charge was needed for the bombing.

The explosive was available on the streets of Miami, and the bomb materials were bought and fashioned in the United States, most sources believe.

However, one source told us the bomb was actually constructed in Chile.

It was later delivered to the Miami area by a Chilean military official carrying a diplomatic passport and flying in a military airplane, the source said. The device was transmitted to a member of Brigade 2506, we are told. He then carried it to New Jersey where the assassination team was waiting for it. They used the bomb, according to our sources, to kill Letelier.

The Justice Dept. had no formal comment on the case. We have learned that prosecutors, however, are trying to figure how to get testimony from Chileans with diplomatic immunity and how to extradite potential defendants from Chile.

Footnote: The Chilean government has repeatedly denied any involvement with the assassination. Spokesmen for Brigade 2506 also have sworn that their members had nothing to do with murdering Letelier. Incidentally, Chile has announced the dissolution of DINA. But our sources say its duties simply have been taken over by other organizations.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Graciela Olivarez is raising hackles inside the Community Services Administration. This is the agency that has taken over the work of the Poverty Corps. Not long after she took command of the new agency, she called the staff together not to outline programs to help the poor but to complain about coffee stains on the floor and waste paper in the ladies' rooms.

— President Carter has earmarked $4 billion to create 600,000 temporary jobs. Yet a tiny office inside the Commerce Dept. has helped create more than one million permanent jobs in the United States on a meager $100,000 budget. This two-man office runs the Invest in USA program, which has persuaded several foreign manufacturers to set up plants in this country.

— Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., leader of the congressional black caucus, called on President Carter last week to complain about high unemployment among blacks. Inside the oval office, Mitchell told the president to his face: "Mr. President, when you're right, I'll praise you and stand by you. But when you're wrong, I'll fight you all the way." The president flashed his famous smile. "Congressman," he said, "you've been doing that already."

— President Carter's embattled budget director, Bert Lance, has been so busy defending himself that he seldom shows up any more at the senior staff meetings. At press time, he hadn't put in an appearance at a staff meeting in more than two weeks. He has been represented instead by his deputy director, 36-year-old James McIntyre, who also has strong Georgia credentials. He's a native of Vidalia, Ga., and a 1963 graduate of the University of Georgia law school.

Paul Harvey

Jesse Jackson's challenge

If the appropriate slogan of the Martin Luther King crusades was "We shall overcome!" —

The best thing his heir, Jesse Jackson, could do for black people would be to challenge them properly to use their new opportunities: "We shall measure up!"

This last summer, the job market for school-agers was never better. The Labor Department reports employment of 16-to-21-year-olds at a record high — 15 million plus.

At the same time, record numbers of black schoolagers were unemployed — 34.8 percent in July. Unemployed while jobs were going begging.

The number of help-wanted ads in newspapers has just increased for the 25th consecutive month.

Farmers are so desperate for harvest hands that they are pleading with the Labor Department to allow the importation of foreign farm workers.

In the cities, cab companies are going broke because they can't get enough drivers, and domestic household help is unavailable at any price.

The easy out is to blame the unemployed for being shiftless and lazy — preferring welfare to work.

I'm unconvinced it is entirely their fault but, at any event, harping on the problem is not contributing to a solution.

For two generations, politicians have been buying public office with promises of more something-for-nothing. For two generations, welfare recipients have learned that it pays to be poor.

When a poor family can live in a public housing project in Chicago, collecting food stamps, ADC, welfare and whatall — an equivalent income of $16,000 a year tax free — they naturally will not seek jobs cooking, cleaning, cabdriving or apple-picking.

When Chicago's Jesse Jackson first opened an office in Washington, he raised hopes that he might become a black Moses for his people.

He began urging black students to stay off dope, stay out of jail, to prepare themselves with good grades for good jobs.

He tried to shame and scold and cajole and encourage young blacks to clean up, shape up, prove themselves.

But now he is back to criticizing the government for not doing more to "provide jobs."

The jobs are there. The jobs are going begging. It is the incentive to work which is missing. And the more government "provides," the less incentive will remain.

If parents have lost their grip — if politicians are intimidated — if the pundits have nothing to offer blacks but more self-pity — the urgent need for somebody with the eloquence of a Jesse Jackson and the stomach of a top sergeant to get these kids off the pity-pot and on their feet!

Just in jest

Make conservation financially attractive and you'll find any number of loyal conservationists doing their utmost to be cooperative. — In many restaurants drinking water is now served only on request. Think of the glass-washing that saves! I am also told that some bars are cutting down on the number of ice cubes they put in their customers' drinks. A small saving, but then, as the old saying goes, a penny saved is a penny earned. — In the meantime, however, since it would cost us several bucks to replace the old shower head with one that cuts the water flow in half, how many of us have bothered to make that simple change?

Retiring Post had his faults

By Earl Waters

The retirement of the Legislature's analyst, A. Alan Post, has prompted many well deserved plaudits for his high standard of performance during a reign of more than a quarter century. In fairness to his successor, whose job will be difficult enough without having to live with a legend, it should be pointed out that Post was no superbeing now deserving of sainthood.

That is not to deny his good qualities which are considerable. Among them is honesty, intelligence, dedication and a particular affinity to the career he chose.

Post was hired by the first man to occupy the job, then called the Legislative Auditor, Rolland A. Vandegrift, a tough talking fiscal conservative whom he succeeded when death overtook Vandegrift some four years later. Initially a Republican, Post retreated to being an "independent" voter by registration soon afterwards and was a non-participant in partisan politics thereafter.

Although in many ways he was unassuming, there was in his makeup a tendency to positiveness which occasionally warped his perspective. Also, he didn't contend that he didn't make mistakes, he was at times hard to convince that he had in fact erred, even to the point of being a bit testy about it. And, while he endeavored to walk a straight non-partisan path in his work, there were times when he would bend to the wind although perhaps not so much as to impeach his integrity.

This was, of course, understandable. Post was not so lofty as not to know on which side his bread was buttered.

He held the office at the pleasure of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee. It was controlled by the majority party which has shifted back and fourth between Republicans and Democrats throughout the years Post served.

Tenure in such a job, which permits the holder to make recommendations on every aspect of government and on legislative proposals, depends upon an ability to recognize political realities.

It was one of those shifts which nearly ended Post's tenure. That was when Democratic Sen. George Miller Jr. became committee chairman.

During his 14 years legislative service up to that time, Miller had developed some bitter criticisms of Post. But Post adeptly adjusted to the new order and weathered that storm as he did the many other changes both in partisan control as well as philosophical views which have occurred during his years.

While his accumulated experience has been of great value to the Legislature and to the state, the position of near unassailability which he attained during the past decade represents a dangerous threat to good government.

It got to the point where to speak against Post was as speaking against God or motherhood. Even the members of the Legislature feared to criticize him publicly.

Fortunately, Post was not a J. Edgar Hoover type and did not attempt to exercise power in such fashion. But no one should become so awesome that critics fear to speak out.

Legislation is a give and take system where opposition is healthy for it contributes to better solutions by bringing all views to the front. Post's job was to oppose the administration but it shouldn't make him immune from criticism. There is nothing absolute about politics and government is anything but an exact science.

Post's successor should not walk in awe at what has gone before. Neither should the Legislature permit him to become all powerful.

Ann Landers

Don't take a bite lying down

Dear Ann Landers: My boyfriend, Buzzy, is a sweet guy, but now and then I see signs of a terrible temper.

Last Friday night when we were horsing around on the floor, I got a toe-hold on him. (I learned it from watching wrestling on TV.) I think he went a little crazy, Ann. The guy actually bit me on the hand. I don't mean just a nibble, I mean a real bite that broke the skin. When I saw the blood I nearly fainted.

Buzzy said he was sorry, that he lost his head, and promised never to do such a thing again. I forgave him. The next day my mother saw the teethmarks and asked what happened. I was going to put the blame of Tuffy (our dog), but decided I'd better tell the truth. When I told Mom Buzzy bit me she was horrified — said a human bite can be very dangerous. Is this true? So far I'm O.K. Please tell me if Mom is right. — Nipped By Nick

Dear Nipped: Yes, she is right. You were lucky. Every human mouth is loaded with bacteria. You could have gotten a bad infection.

If that clown ever bites you again, wash the wound with soap and water, see a doctor promptly, and send Buzzy for a long walk on a short dock.

Dear Ann: I was ticked off by the letter from the office worker who complained because a personal letter was opened by someone in the mail room.

You can see from this stationery I am the president of a well-known company. I do not pay the mail room girl a salary to deliver personal letters to my employes. Nor do I pay my employes to read their personal mail on my time. Moreover, my employes have no right to use my typewriters and writing paper to carry on personal correspondence.

I'll bet you'll hear a lot on this subject from bosses all over the country and they will all be on my side. — Third Eye

Dear Eye: You were right. I did — and they were. What's more, as an employer, I must say you have a point. Read on if you want to know what the postal authorities in Chicago had to say on the subject.

All mail addressed to a business (regardless of whether or not it is marked "personal" is delivered according to the instructions issued by the head of the business — unless it is registered mail.

If the boss says all mail delivered to the mail room is to be opened, so be it "Personal And Confidential" has no legal significance. This does not mean, however, that the boss has the right to open letters addressed to others. The directive applies only to the letter-opener in the mail room.

Dear Ann Landers: In one of your replies recently you asked, "Where are the State Police?" Well, they were probably on the highway doing their job, but with all the "ratters" on C.B.'s they don't stand a chance of catching many speeders.

Those C.B.'ers are forever warning each other to look out for the "County Mountie," "City Kitty," "Smokey Bear" or "Picture Taker."

From the way you answered that letter, I have a hunch you are a good driver. And when you gave your handle as "Lincoln Land Annie Baby" I just knew you were a C.B.'er of long Standing. How about the lowdown? — Green Eyed Luke From Creaky Canyon

Dear Creak: Wrong on both counts. I quit driving 20 years ago as my contribution to the pedestrians of Chicago. That "handle" was one I made up at the typewriter.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Elvis from the belt buckle up

Argument continues over which national TV show Elvis Presley first appeared on. Wasn't Ed Sullivan's program contrary to widespread belief. Sullivan vowed he wouldn't have that "sneering squirming kid" on his stage. But Steve Allen, emceeing a rival show opposite Ed's, invited Elvis there. And for the first time, Steve topped Sullivan in the ratings. Ed sent Allen a congratulatory telegram which read: "You rat." And Elvis then was asked onto the Ed Sullivan Show. That performance infuriated numerous Elvis devotees. The cameras only focused on him from the belt buckle up.

TOWHEADS

Q. "Why do we refer to blond kids as 'towheads'?"

A. The "tow" comes from "taw" which once was another word for any tuft of flax, hemp or short fiber, usually light colored.

Q. "What did Lee Majors do before he took up acting in 'The Big Valley' and then 'The $6 Million Man'?"

A. He was a playground instructor.

Q. "Has the weather ever got so hot that popcorn popped on the stalk?"

A. At least once, if the record is right. News reports indicate it happened in Brownstone, Ind., in the summer of 1936.

Naturalists say their scientific studies indicate it takes a pair of lions in the wild approximately 1,500 matings on the average to produce a litter of cubs.

Do you know what happens to all the U.S. government's cashed paychecks? They're recycled into bathroom tissue.

LADY GODIVA

Fiercely female archivists in Great Britain now contend Lady Godiva did not ride nude through the streets of Coventry 900-odd years ago, but rode that white horse "stripped only of all signs of her rank." And there was no Tom the Tailor, who peeped, and then went blind, they aver. I do not chose to believe them.

The average American hog now is not only 250 pounds lighter than it was 30 years ago, but it's livelier, cleaner and smarter, too. And it's also more inquisitive and more aggressive, thus obviously capable of producing better bacon.

If you get the feeling sometimes that you can't keep up with the rat race, sir, you must be slowing down considerably. Top speed of the rat is only about 5 m.p.h.

You can't be a licensed hairdresser in Colorado without 1,550 hours of general instruction plus 100 hours of supervised shampoo lessons.

Dr. Miller

Guinea pig seems neurotic

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chico seems neurotic. Can a male Peruvian guinea pig, two years old, find happiness alone? — M.B.

DEAR M.B.: Chico could be happy, or he could be neurotic, or he could be happy and neurotic. Being completely sane may not be all that beneficial for a lonesome little pig . . .

DEAR DR. MILLER: We suddenly find ourselves suffering a confidence crisis over our veterinarian. We're very fond of him — he's saved our dogs and cats many times — but my son swears he just told him that dogs can't get mange from other dogs.

I personally know this is not true since, years ago, I had a cocker spaniel who picked up a case of mange from a neighbor's dog and we had to give him baths in a stinking sulphur soap to get rid of it. Truly, how can we continue to have confidence in our veterinarian when he made such a statement? — A.T.

DEAR A.T.: A quick call to your own veterinarian could have solved your dilemma in short order. Demodectic mange (in years past called red mange) is caused by a mange mite which is transmitted from the bitch to her offspring. Only the newborn, or very young puppies, are susceptible. Older puppies and adult dogs cannot pick up this demodectic mange either from their mother or from any other dog. This was undoubtedly the type of mange your veterinarian was referring to. Other types of mange may be, and are, transmitted from one dog to another, be they puppies or mature.

The most common example of the type of mange easily transmitted from one dog to another, and occasionally from dogs to humans, is sarcoptic mange. This mange mite succumbs to sulphur and the old rotten-egg-odored sulphur baths are the standard treatment for this type of mange. (Incidentally, those sulphur baths are not a satisfactory treatment for the demodectic mange).

DEAR DR. MILLER: Should Terry and Toodles, my parakeets, be getting vitamins? They've never seemed to need them, but I just bought a bottle of vitamin drops for them on impulse. Should I use them? — H.E.

DEAR H.E.: Vitamins for the birds? Why not? They may just fill in a necessary niche or two. Birds can often benefit from dietary improvement. Remember, though, vitamins don't take the place of a high-quality, properly-presented, balanced diet.

Joe Firman

What part(s) do you play?

Does Jimmy Carter like being President? Does he like being Billy's brother? Is he happy about the Panama Canal? Can he take care of Amy AND run the country?

In the olden times, when the world was young, O best beloved, the civilized countries stood awe-struck at what was variously known as "a man of parts" or "the Renaissance man," a chap who had many interests and was good at all of them.

Today YOU are the Renaissance man. (Take a bow, Renny!)

The average American goes to work at some sort of a job to earn some sort of a living wage. He puts in his hours, more or less, and returns home suddenly (SUDDENLY?) husband, father, psychologist, financier, teacher, preacher, plumber, electrician, gardener and possibly second-baseman on the local sandlot team. How Renaissance can you get?

The trouble is (a bad way to start a sentence) that none of these diverse interests and activities can ever be completely separated, right? You (sales manager) sit at your desk planning a campaign while you (father) worry about the braces on little Anastasia's teeth, and you (sports fan) debate the outcome of the football season, and you (— —) recall the fragrance of that blonde's perfume at the party last night.

Maybe you botch a job on your drill press and the boss chews you out. He is talking to a man who a) had a fight with his wife that morning; b) threw a rod on the way to work, and c) got his tax bill and an overdrawn notice from the bank in the same mail. A complex and volatile bomb.

This is not to stress the gloomy side of the picture too much. Perhaps you are doing well on your job, only slightly distracted by the fact that after work you must pick up your shirts at the laundry, take Sally to her dancing lesson, teach Junior how to drive, and repair the lawn mower. And don't forget the Barkers want us over for a drink at 5.

The whole situation of you, complex man, in society, is infinitely compounded by the fact that everyone you come into contact with during the day is also complex man with his infinite problems and concerns. The grocery store checker has a sick husband and sore feet. The policeman writing you a ticket has been having a fight with the desk sergeant and his son is threatening to drop out of high school. The man you are trying to sell insurance to has a toothache and can't do the New Math. Your waitress has a date with a real cute feller tonight and can't wait till quitting time.

It would be great if we all had little compartments in our mind and/or consciousness which we could open and shut at will, so we would be completely one thing at a time — salesman and prospect, worker and boss, teacher and student, cowboy and Indian, etc. Alas, as they used to say in the olden tymes. We must go on playing our various roles and doing our best to sort them out and perform them at the rignt time.

"All the world's a stage," Shakespeare said. "One man in his time plays many parts."

He didn't warn us that we had to play them all at the same time.

Garlic and blood pressure

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have high blood pressure. I am taking medicine for it. If you take garlic pills or eat fresh garlic will your blood pressure go down? I've had so many people tell me this. When I go to the hospital my blood pressure is normal. My blood pressure is 162 over 98 and I am 56. Is that too high?

DEAR READER — The only way garlic helps blood pressure is if people make you nervous and raise your pressure. The garlic will help you avoid people. Seriously, there is no truth in the often repeated claim that garlic helps lower blood pressure.

If by going to the hospital you mean staying in bed in the hospital, it is true that when a person with mildly elevated pressure is put at bed rest the pressure often falls.

Why? Because the bed rest results in flushing out salt (sodium) and water from the body tissues. These people often get similar results from taking one of the diuretics commonly used in the treatment of mildly elevated blood pressure.

Your pressure is not high enough to cause anyone to be disturbed about it or to give you strong medicines but it is abnormal if it persists at those levels. If it is that high only part of the time when you are tense it might not be so important.

For mild high blood pressure the first and most important thing to do is eliminate any extra fat stores you can from your body by a sensible diet and mild exercise program such as walking.

If weight control does not result in decreasing the pressure enough then the doctor may want to use one of the diuretics. That is usually sufficient in mild cases. If high pressure persists he may want to use other medicines.

Anyone who has elevated blood pressure should eliminate stimulants — especially coffee, tea, and colas, and try to avoid stressful situations.

To give you more information on blood pressure I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For some months now I've been goofy over Bromo-Seltzer. I take three or four glasses a day and have been wondering if it does any harm. I often use it as a pop.

DEAR READER — It makes a difference how much powder you put in each glass. The truth is that if a person takes a lot of bromide from any source — and Bromo-Seltzer contains potassium bromide — over a period of time they run the risk of bromide poisoning.

It may cause drowsiness, neurological and emotional disturbances, a rash and other more serious effects.

I doubt you will have this problem if you limit your use of it, but regular use in large amounts should be avoided. Why don't you switch to one of the carbonated soda drinks such as Tom Collins mix or vodka mixer that contains some fruit juices for flavoring and a little fizz which you might enjoy. The mix is not harmful. It is what most people put into the mix that causes the problems.

(Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.)

For Tuesday, Sept. 13, 1977

Your Birthday, Sept. 13, 1977

You will insist on having the lead role this coming year instead of playing second fiddle. This is good. No one can advance your self-interests better than you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's an aura of new hope and promise about you today. You may not sense its import because you're not fully aware of all the ramifications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Set your sights on loftier targets now. Raising your standards a bit will stimulate you to greater efforts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When you're formulating plans, don't keep those you need to help you in the dark. They'll be loath to cooperate if they feel left out.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you're closely associated with will be extremely insistent on having his or her own way today. Little harm will be done by going along.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Important career changes are in the mill for you today. Proceed with caution so you'll be able to take advantage of them when they pop up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In managing others today, strive for what's best for all, not merely for what is more convenient for you. Think of yourself last.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Let go of things that have been proven impractical and unproductive. This is a day to think of fresh beginnings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Objectivity is a must for you today. If you permit your viewpoint to be too narrow or confining, it will stifle your chances for success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you're generous to a fault. Today, however, you could be overly concerned with taking care of No. 1.

Jim: "We get so many letters about the Blackwood convention that we really ought to devote some more articles to slam bidding and the proper use of this fine convention."

Oswald: "Here is an example of its abuse. A Canadian reader wanted to know how he could have reached the lay down six-spade contract. His bidding is shown in the box."

Jim: "North violated the first rule for when not to use Blackwood. You just should not use Blackwood when you have a worthless doubleton in any suit not bid by your partner."

Oswald: "The scientific bidders would start with a three-diamond bid by North. South would rebid three spades, North four clubs and South six clubs. He would like his clubs and his singleton heart whereupon North would close the bidding at six spades."

Jim: "There is also a fairly simple, but elegant way to get to six. North bids five spades right away. This bid asks partner to cue bid if he can take the first heart, to bid six spades if he can take the second one and to pass if he is looking at two quick heart losers."

Sometimes it seems like a bother to use soap when you wash. But soap really does make you cleaner than plain water does.

Water cannot penetrate grease and dirt by itself. Water alone merely stands on grease or rolls off.

When you wash your hands with soap and water, the soap helps wash away the dirt by lowering the water's surface tension.

The soap particles gather at the water's surface and force the water to spread out, making the water wetter (this same action helps form bubbles and suds).

With surface tension reduced, water can penetrate into the small hollows and valleys of your skin more completely to loosen the dirt.

Besides making the water wetter, the soap breaks up the grease and dirt particles and "pulls" them away from your skin.

Then the soap holds dirt particles in the water so that they can be rinsed away, leaving your skin clean.

Dodgers try to clinch flag at home

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers, with their magic number still holding at eight, open a seven-game homestand tonight (7:30 p.m.) with the San Diego Padres providing the opposition.

Don Sutton (13-8) has been moved up one night in the rotation to replace Burt Hooton who has a tender elbow. Dave Friesleben (7-7) will start for the Padres.

If Hooton (10-7) can't make it Tuesday, the pitchers will be Dennis Lewallyn (1-0) vs. Bob Shirley (9-17).

Sunday's 6-2 loss to the Reds in Cincinnati leaves the Dodgers with an 11½ game lead, an 8-8 record against the Reds this season, a 4-3 mark for the road trip and a 7-3 ledger for Sept.

"Well, we gained two more days anyway," said manager Tommy Lasorda sourly. "That's what you say when you lose two straight to a team don't you?

"You tell people you lost ground but gained days."

You're still 11½ ahead and you could only be 9½, suggested a helpful writer.

"Yeah and we could be 15½," retorted Lasorda.

When are you going to clinch it, another asked.

"As fast as we bleeping can," bleeped Lasorda who readily admits to being a sore loser. "What kind of a question is that? If I knew the answer to that, I'd stay home until then."

Then the Dodger manager turned his attention to the upcoming homestand trying to figure out the pitching the Dodgers will face when the Reds come to town Wednesday and Thursday.

Since both clubs are in a five-man rotation, it figures to be a pair of rematches between Tommy John and Fredie Norman Wednesday night and Doug Rau and Tom Seaver Thursday.

That is, if both managers follow the rotation they have been using. Reds' manager Sparky Anderson Saturday told writers traveling with the Dodgers that he wouldn't waste either Norman or Seaver against "T.J."

"Tommy's convinced me," said Anderson. "It's foolish to waste my best pitchers when he's going against us. I'm better off using one of the kids."

Mario Soto and Paul Moskau are pitching tonight and Tuesday against Houston. Doug Capilla has a bad back and is is not known when he can return to action.

However, Capilla was extremely impressive against the Lasorda men in Los Angeles August 9.

"Well, whoever it is, he'll be pitching in our ballpark," said Lasorda searching for something positive. "I'm proud of what my guys have done this year.

"Who would have thought we'd be 11½ games ahead of this club (the Reds) at this time? That's a hell of a ballclub they have here in Cincinnati."

It was just as well Lasorda turned his attention away from Sunday's game. The Dodgers were anything but impressive.

Rick Rhoden (16-8) gave up four runs on three hits, two walks and a wild pitch in the first inning. One of the hits was Johnny Bench's 33rd double driving in his 99th and 100th runs of the season.

Bench now has topped the century mark in ribbies six times. The husky catcher has hit safely in eight straight games and has 27 hits in his last 76 at-bats (.355).

Rhoden was no puzzle this particular Sunday afternoon. He departed after allowing five runs and eight hits in six innings.

Although the Dodgers got nine hits, they couldn't put them together and left eight runners stranded for a total of 51 left on base during the seven-game trip.

They had starter Jack Billingham on the ropes with the bases loaded and one out in the second inning. But Steve Yeager grounded into a double play.

They did knock Billingham out in the third when Rhoden's single, a walk to Davey Lopes and a hit batter (Bill Russell) loaded the bases with no outs.

That brought in Tom Hume who got Reggie Smith to pop out. Ron Cey's sacrifice fly scored Rhoden and Lopes came in on Steve Garvey's single.

But Rick Monday was allowed to swing at a 3-0 pitch and tapped into an inning-ending force out.

"I gave him (Monday) the hit sign because I know he can hit," said Lasorda defending his strategy. "Rick strikes out a lot, so if you make him take a pitch, you take away one-third of his hitting. If it had been a guy that makes contact, it would have been a different matter."

You must remember Lasorda was a pitcher not a hitter. Tommy apparently subscribes to an odd theory that you let hitters who miss the ball swing at it and hitters that make contact take pitches!

Garvey ran the Dodgers out of a possible scoring stanza in the Dodger sixth. With one out, Steve lined a single to left and foolishly tried to stretch it to a double.

He was out by the proverbial mile.

And then there was the humiliation of being beaten by Hume (1-3). In notching his first major league victory, the rookie righthander held the Dodgers scoreless the last seven innings.

• Hume carried a 10.24 earned run average into the contest!

DODGER DATA — With a crowd of 44,694 Sunday, the Dodgers and Reds drew a total of 133,421 for the three games bringing the Reds' season total to 2,375,999.

All told, 702,942 have turned out in Los Angeles and Cincinnati to see the two play each other in 15 dates (16 games). That's an average of 46,863 per date.

The Dodgers won five of the nine games played in Cincinnati between the two clubs. But the Reds hold a 4-3 advantage at Dodger Stadium.

Dusty Baker, who went 0-for-3 Sunday, had an 11-game hitting streak snapped.

Tommy John says he's faster now than he was before he had surgery on his arm.

"I was under the bubble so to speak," John says, "with everyone watching me to see how I threw. I kept throwing or trying to throw hard all the time I was recovering. I think I have more zip now than I had before it (the injury) happened."

THE NEW CHAMP

Argentina's Guillermo Vilas holds his newly-won U.S. Open Tennis Championship trophy on his head at Forest Hills, N.Y. Sunday night after beating Jimmy Connors in the finals.

Vilas quite happy with self

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Guillermo Vilas is No. 1 today, a proud, self-satisfied young man.

"I'm very happy with myself," he said. "I'm a very good friend of myself."

His critics had said his scorching clay court victory streak of 45 matches was not as meaningful as it seemed because it included no matches against the giants of the game of tennis, Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors.

But Sunday, the 25-year-old Argentine with the extreme topspin backhand, outplayed Connors 2-6, 6-3, 7-6, 6-0 in the $462.420 U.S. Open championships. He hasn't had a crack yet at Borg, who had to default during this tournament because of a strained shoulder.

"This puts me very, very happy for sure," the brighteyed and exuberant Vilas said after being mobbed by adoring fans at the West Side Tennis Club. The crowd had decided the match was over before the umpire did, streaming onto the court as soon as the linesman called a Connors forehand long.

Saturday, the glory was Chris Evert's, as she outfought surprising Wendy Turnbull of Australia 7-6, 6-2 for her third consecutive U.S. Open title. It was roses for both the finalists, but the Open victory was particularly sweet for Miss Evert after her loss in the Wimbledon semifinal to Virginia Wade.

Prize money for each of the winners was $33,000, with $16,500 apiece to Connors and Miss Turnbull.

Vilas, blocked by his admirers and hoisted atop their shoulders, never congratulated Connors, who stormed away from the stadium with his mother and entourage. "I will apologize when I see him," Vilas said. "I wanted to shake his hand."

"He is a great player," he said of Connors. "I have a lot of respect for him. I think he played fair. I had nothing to lose. I knew the pressure was on him since he had not won a major title (this year) and this was his last chance."

Winds gusting up to 20 miles per hour swept over the court, blowing great clouds of dust on them from the synthetic clay like Har-Tru surface. "The wind was very strange," Vilas said of his losing first set. "He was hitting rockets."

But in the second set, as Vilas became more certain, coming in on more balls, Connors grew slightly tentative, and the Argentine was able to break him in the eighth game for 5-3. Vilas, the No. 4 seed, drew a roaring standing ovation as he took the next game with a backhand passing shot.

The third set went to 5-5 and each broke the other's service at love, forcing a tie-breaker. It was reminiscent of the third-set situation Connors faced last year in the final against Borg. But last year, Connors outlasted Borg 11-9 in the tiebreaker and went on to victory.

The tie-breaker went to 3-3, then Vilas moved up to the net for a forehand volley winner. Connors netted a forehand, then Vilas hit one wide, making it 5-4. Vilas hit a forehand to the baseline for 6-4 and won on a swift forehand passing shot.

That gave Vilas extreme confidence. He then broke service in the second game of the fourth set with a crosscourt backhand that touched the sideline, broke again in the fourth when Connors' forehand volley hit the net, then kept his serve, pummeling Connors at love for 5-0.

In the final game, the two were playing the second deuce, forced when Connors doublefaulted. Vilas took the advantage when the struggling Connors hit his forehand approach into the net. Their final rally had just begun when Connors hit his forehand too long.

The linesman saw it that way. Vilas thought he had. Connors stood and stared. Vilas' coach, Ion Tiriac, stood at his courtside seat and looked stern as a bull. The umpire said nothing. But the crowd had decided. The umpire made it official several moments later.

For Miss Evert, her final was the toughest match of the tournament. She had been asking for it all week, complaining politely that she wasn't getting enough competition.

Miss Turnbull provided it with the scurrying game that has given her the name "rabbit" among her World Team Tennis colleagues on the Cleveland Nets.

"She made me play my very best," Miss Evert said. "She played very well and she now can be considered one of the best players in the world."

Despite the loss, Miss Turnbull, seeded 12th, received the recognition that had long avoided her. She beat Ms. Wade and second-seeded Martina Navratilova en route to the final.

The first-set tie-breaker came after 12 games of steady rallies of ground strokes, and Miss Evert won it 7-3.

"Then I let her break me in the first game of the second set and she ran away with it," Miss Turnbull said. "It is really tough to play Chrissie on clay and I think I played very well. I'm really not disappointed."

Even as a loser, Miss Turnbull advanced further than she ever had in a major tournament.

Miss Evert seemed undisturbed by a pinched nerve in her left shoulder, saying it hurt only on the toss for her serve. She said she hadn't seen a doctor yet because she was superstitious.

"If I'm going to get it amputated, I don't want to know about it until after the tournament," Miss Evert joked.

The victory was Miss Evert's 113th straight on clay. "I'm very proud of that statistic," she said.

For seasoned players like Miss Evert, the tournament was a little sad. If all goes according to plan, they never again will play in the famed old horseshoe stadium at the West Side Tennis Club. The U.S. Tennis Association has announced plans to hold the Open in a bigger, new facility in nearby Flushing Meadow. Over the weekend, the USTA announced it had dropped discussions with the West Side Tennis Club over an option to hold the Open here next year in case construction isn't completed at the new site.

Cougars point towards UCLA

HOUSTON (AP) — Starting running back Alois Blackwell says the Houston Cougars, with the best turnaround record in the nation last year, now have two seasons to play.

The first season — the non-conference schedule — begins tonight when the defending Southwest Conference co-champion Cougars host the UCLA Bruins in the Astrodome before a national television audience.

When the Cougars finish with the Bruins tonight, they return to the field Saturday against Penn State.

"We've got a chance to be No. 1 in the nation if we beat UCLA and Penn State," said Blackwell, the outstanding offensive player in Houston's Cotton Bowl victory last January. "But our season won't be over if we lose early. We still have a shot at the conference title and the Cotton Bowl."

There was no such consolation prize for Houston prior to last season. The Cougars spent their final year of independence struggling to a 2-8 record in 1975 but shocked the SWC last year with a 10-2 record and a Cotton Bowl championship.

Houston's chances of repeating as SWC champions may well depend on plugging up a graduation, defection, injury riddled defense. Houston lost four defensive starters, including All-American tackle Wilson Whitley, to graduation.

Linebacker David Hodge, expected to anchor the defense, quit the team and starting nose guard Robert Oglesby and his backup Harry Wright are out with leg injuries. The nose guard position will be manned tonight by Robert Harrison, who's had five days practice at his new position.

"You don't go anywhere but the bathroom without defense," Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said. "We simply must have outstanding performance from our defense for us to consider any success this season."

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue is playing out a different type of drama as he prepares an encore for his first season as Bruin head coach, a 9-2-1 season. Donahue must decide between Steve Bukich and Rich Bashore as his starting quarterback for tonight's season opener.

Try as he might, Donahue says he won't be able to make a decision until today. Bukich, a husky 215-pounder, was backup to Jeff Dankworth last season but Bashore finished spring training in a dead heat for the starting nod.

Even after Donahue decides on a starting quarterback, he still has only three returning offensive starters from last season.

"Our defense is going to have to carry us for the early part of the season," Donahue said.

The Bruins aren't without offensive weapons, however. They'll open at running backs with 1,000-yard rusher Theotis Brown and Olympic hurdler James Owens.

The defense Donahue is counting on so heavily is anchored by linebacker Jerry Robinson, tackle Manu Tuiasosopo and cornerback Levi Armstrong and with a little Texas flavor by Billy Don Jackson, a freshman from Sherman.

Jackson already has captured the hearts of touring Pacific Eight Conference writers, who named him rookie of the year before he has played his first collegiate game.

SGV Saints fall

WEST COVINA — The Long Beach Mustangs clinched the Southern Division title of the California Football League Sunday with a 16-7 win over the San Gabriel Valley Saints in a game played at West Covina High.

The Saints will finish their regular season Sunday at 2 p.m. at West Covina High when they meet the Southern California Rhinos for second place in the Southern Division.

'Bart' will start

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Falcons' quarterback Steve Bartkowski says he will be in the starting lineup Sunday when the Los Angeles Rams invade Atlanta Stadium for the start of the National Football League season, despite suffering a recurrence of a knee injury in the final exhibition game.

Bartkowski was forced out of Sunday's 29-10 loss to the New England Patriots when his right knee buckled on him twice.

The Falcons' No. 1 draft choice in 1974, who missed eight games last season when his knee had to be operated on, has been playing with a specially designed brace.

The brace, similar to one worn by Los Angeles quarterback Joe Namath, was to prevent slippage in the knee after Bartkowski felt something pop in it two weeks ago.

Sunday, it popped twice, forcing the 6-foot-4, 215-pound quarterback to the sidelines twice, the second time for good where an ice pack was applied.

"I'd rather talk about something else," said Bartkowski, who tossed a 63-yard touchdown pass to Alfred Jenkins just before his departure.

Bartkowski said during the game he felt his knee go out on him twice. Falcon team doctors said slippage in the knee was the only problem and indicated an adjustment on the brace should help.

McHargue wins four

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Dancing Femme and Darrel McHargue enjoyed great success before a crowd of 17,670 at Del Mar Sunday, but it wasn't a memorable day for Marcelino Olguin.

Dancing Femme led all the way in scoring her fifth straight victory, a 1¼ length triumph in the $59,650 Ramona Handicap.

The victory was the fourth of the day for McHargue, who now has ridden 44 winners to 49 for Laffit Pincay, leading jockey of the Del Mar meeting.

Dancing Femme, carrying high weight of 122 pounds, covered 1⅛ miles on turf in 1:48 2-5 and paid $6.80, $4.60 and $3. Up to Juliet, a 24-to-1 shot ridden by A.L. Diaz, finished second and returned $17.60 and $6.80. Swingtime, with Fernando Toro aboard, paid $2.60 to show.

There were 11 entries in the event for older fillies and mares.

Apprentice jockey Olguin suffered fractured ribs on the right side when he was injured in a first race spill.

Olguin, 18, who has ridden 23 winners at Del Mar this season, was taken to Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla, where he'll remain hospitalized for observation the next few days.

Olguin was injured when his mount, Mayaguez, clipped a horse's heels on the backstretch, stumbled and fell.

Favored Kulak, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, won the $27,450 El Cajon Stakes by three-quarters of a length Saturday. Kulak covered 1 1-16 miles in 1:41 1-5 and paid $6, $4.20 and $3.20. Centennial Pride was second and returned $4.80 and $4.20. Alpha Boy paid $3.20 to show.

Angels put Chisox on a 'diet'

ANAHEIM (AP) — Manager Bob Lemon of the Chicago White Sox has a recommendation for overweight Americans interested in shedding their excess poundage.

Lemon's White Sox split a doubleheader with the California Angels Sunday, winning the first game 6-2 on a four-hitter by Chris Knapp and losing a 5-4 decision in the second game on a succession of bad-hop grounders and fly balls that dropped out of outfielders' gloves.

Chicago made 14 errors in losing four of the six games played against the Angels during the past four days.

Lemon approached Angels' broadcaster Don Drysdale at the end of Sunday's doubleheader.

"Want to know how to lose weight?" Lemon asked Drysdale.

The former Dodgers' pitching star was interested.

"Try managing," advised Lemon.

Knapp struck out 13 Angels in the opener and had a no-hitter working until Rance Mulliniks lined a clean single with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Jorge Orta paced the White Sox with four runs-batted-in, three on a bases-loaded double in the top of the seventh.

Chicago had a 4-2 lead entering the bottom of the seventh inning of the nightcap. What followed illustrated what Lemon was talking about.

With one out, Dave Chalk hit a fly ball to right-center field. After a long run, Oscar Gamble got a glove on the ball, but it squirted out for a double.

Silverio Martinez replaced Dave Hamilton on the mound for the White Sox and walked Ron Jackson. Martinez struck out Thad Bosley for the second out.

Pinch-hitter Gil Flores then hit a grounder toward shortstop Don Kessinger, but the ball took a bad hop, bouncing high over Kessinger's head for a double. Chalk scored on the play, making it 4-3.

Mulliniks followed with another grounder toward Kessinger, which eluded the shortstop's grasp, allowing Jackson to score the tying run.

There was more in the eight inning. Bobby Bonds opened with a walk. Bonds stole second and reached third when catcher Brian Downing's throw hit Bonds for the White Sox' sixth error of the afternoon.

Mario Guerrero followed with a double to left-center, driving in the inning run. The ball hit Chet Lemon's glove and bounced out.

The Angels open an eightgame trip tonight at Texas. Nolan Ryan, 19-13, will attempt to become the American League's first 20-game winner against Dock Ellis, 8-12.

The White Sox returned to Chicago following Sunday's games. They play the Minnesota Twins tonight.

NFL experts might be a little edgy

By Associated Press

The National Football League has completed its last six-game preseason with a few surprises that could be making the prognosticators a little edgy before the start of the regular season next Sunday.

The league has voted to drop two exhibition games and add two regular season games for a 16-4 split. In recent years, the schedule has called for 14 season contests and six exhibitions.

But in the last go-round of preseason games, there were some shocking results involving preseason favorites and some rumblings of discontent.

It all started Thursday night with Dallas' 30-0 lashing of American Conference powerhouse Pittsburgh and continued Saturday night with expansion Tampa Bay's 14-0 whitewashing of perennial playoff contender Baltimore.

On Sunday, the New England Patriots -- who some observers believe have the best chance to unseat the Oakland Raiders as Super Bowl champs — ran their preseason record to 5-1 with a 29-10 triumph over Atlanta. But the kingpins of their offensive line, Leon Gray and John Hannah, walked out on the team in a contract dispute before the game.

The two other games Sunday that closed out the preseason schedule saw the Miami Dolphins outscore the New York Giants 27-21 and San Diego outlast Seattle 38-20.

Minnesota bombed Buffalo 30-6, New Orleans edged Houston 20-16, Cincinnati crushed Chicago 24-6, Denver blanked San Francisco 20-0 and Kansas City outscored St. Louis 37-20 on Saturday.

Steve Grogan threw touchdown passes to Russ Francis and Darryl Stingley to pace the New England victory, but Coach Chuck Fairbanks was stung by the Hannah-Gray walkout.

"No club can lose two All-Pros without it hurting the team," he said. "You do your best with what you have."

Former tight end Pete Brock, who took over Hannah's guard slot Sunday, said, "I don't think it will create any dissension."

The two offensive linemen want to renegotiate their contracts, citing higher pay for others in the league of similar stature at their positions.

Team President William Sullivan said the two players "probably would get increases" if their contracts had expired. But he said he would not renegotiate.

Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, who only has three preseason victories in a total of 26 exhibition and regular-season games in the Buccaneers' existence, saw top draft choice Ricky Bell score both Tampa Bay touchdowns.

"They laughed before the game and now we're laughing," said McKay.

With victories Saturday, New Orleans, Denver and Cincinnati preceded New England in having the best preseason marks — 5-1.

The Saints got completions on 13 of 17 passes from Bobby Scott before he left the game against Houston with a sprained knee in the third period.

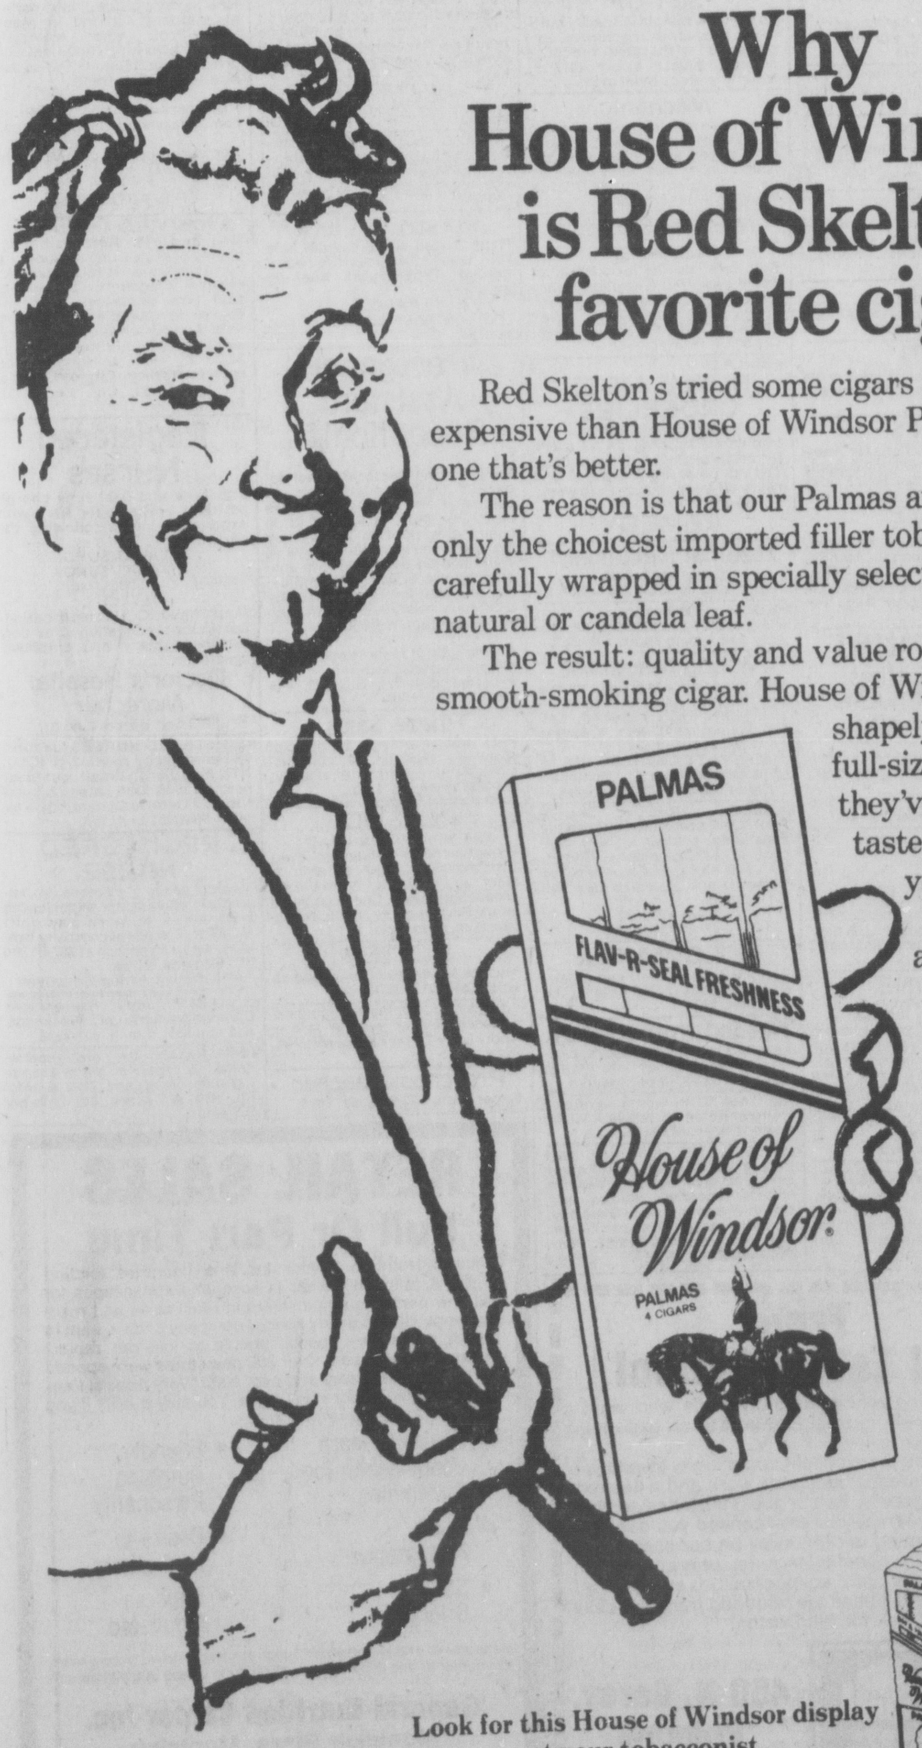
Why House of Windsor is Red Skelton's favorite cigar.



Red Skelton's tried some cigars that are more expensive than House of Windsor Palmas, but never one that's better.

The reason is that our Palmas are made from only the choicest imported filler tobaccos and then carefully wrapped in specially selected Honduran natural or candela leaf.

The result: quality and value rolled into one rich, smooth-smoking cigar. House of Windsor Palmas, shapely Sportsman or full-sized Panatelas—they've got the kind of taste that could make you forget you ever smoked anything else.

Look for this House of Windsor display at your tobacconist.

Strike averted as Bonita teachers sign contract

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

Bonita school district teachers were in the classroom today after a threatened strike failed to materialize this morning when district teachers voted 191 to 28 to approve a two-vear contract with the district.

The vote effectively ends the 15-month long negotiation stalemate between the Bonita Unified School District serving San Dimas and La Verne and the approximately 270-member Bonita Unified Teachers Association (BUTA).

An atmosphere of relief at the end of negotiations and some dissatisfaction with the contract were evident at today's 6:30 a.m. meeting in the San Dimas Community Church where BUTA members voted on the proposed contract; the first the district has negotiated under the state collective bargaining law for teachers, the Rodda Act.

While details of the contract were not available because BUTA and district negotiators agreed to hold back information until ratification of the contract by the Bonita school board Wednesday evening, an informed source said the two-year contract calls for a 7.8 per cent pay increase over the district's 1975-76 pay schedule.

The contract also provides a 38 per cent increase in fringe benefits, not an outstanding increase when compared to other teacher contracts in the valley.

The agreement, which extends to June 30, 1979 calls for wage and fringe benefit reopeners from March 1 to April 1 next year with only five meetings allowed to be called in that period before an impasse is declared. This is becoming a standard tool in many teacher contracts.

Teachers did win two major victories in the contract. These were binding arbitration in the district's grievance procedure and a seniority clause in the district's involuntary transfer policy. Under the seniority system, all other things being equal, the teacher with the least seniority would be transferred on an involuntary basis.

The Bonita contract also includes summer school teachers, a provision not found in some other valley contracts.

One additional provision calls for a $146,000 sweetener added to the contract which will go to all those persons who taught in the district last year and are still there this year. The funds are to be divided equally between those persons and will amount to about $500 per teacher.

District Supt. James Johnson said this morning, "It's a good contract. I would have a hard time seeing how anyone could say it is not."

"I've often said the first contract comes the hardest, but I'm relieved it is over. We have all had to put in more than our fair share of time and energy on this."

Johnson credited the recent hard negotiations combined with additional state money for the new contract in reaching the settlement. He said the approximately $300,000 the district should receive from the passage of the state school finance bill is reflected in the contract.

"We are certainly happy we didn't have a strike and we are looking forward to a great school year," said Johnson.

While general relief prevailed, BUTA officials and members of the rank and file were not as ebullient.

Said BUTA Vice President Dick Gale, "The work of this organization is not over. Regardless of this vote, we still have other objectives. Over the past 15 months we have clarified where we stand as teachers in the eyes of the administration of the Bonita Unified School District."

Bonita High School teacher John Metcalf said, "I'll be happy to see the dispute come to an end," but added, "We could never get the full support needed for a strike."

Ramona Intermediate School teacher Mary Todd said, "I have mixed feelings about it (the contract). Our team worked so hard and they really didn't get what we should have had."

Dolores Gonzales, a first through third grade teacher at Grace Miller School and a 23-year veteran of the district said, "I'm very happy and very relieved. It was a long time coming. We showed a lot of togetherness and unity over the summer."

BUTA President Jay Leonard said he was very relieved but added that the organization would have a statement ready following the anticipated board ratification of the contract Wednesday evening.

"Everybody's happy," said Leonard.

Contradiction in Carter's statement on Lance hinted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter was fully briefed last December on the restrictions which had been placed on one of Budget Director Bert Lance's banks, a Senate committee was told today.

The testimony by Robert Bloom, first deputy comptroller of the currency, appeared to contradict Carter's statement Saturday that he knew of only one Lance financial difficulty before nominating his close friend.

The nomination was submitted to the Senate after Carter took office in January, although Carter had announced his intention to nominate Lance on Nov. 24.

Carter was asked the extent of his previous knowledge of Lance's financial difficulties while campaigning in Newark, N.J., for Gov. Brendan Byrne.

"The only thing I knew was that he had a problem in the 1974 campaign for governor of Georgia and it had been resolved," Carter said.

Asked if he knew of any other difficulties, he said, "No, I didn't."

Bloom told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee that on Dec. 1, after press inquiries concerning the existence of a so-called enforcement agreement at the Calhoun First National Bank in Calhoun, Ga., he suggested that Lance fully brief either Carter or his press secretary, Jody Powell, on the matter.

"Subsequent events confirm that Mr. Lance followed my advice," he said.

Earlier, a Justice Department spokesman confirmed that the criminal fraud division had received a comptroller's report which reportedly shows that Lance widely used bankowned aircraft for family and political purposes. But he said the referral was routine and did not necessarily mean prosecution was under consideration.

The enforcement agreement mentioned by Bloom called for the bank to discontinue allowing overdrafts to Lance, his wife and directors of the bank who were members of his wife's family. Lance was chairman of the board of the Calhoun bank.

The agreement was entered into in December 1975 and was lifted two days before Carter announced his intention to nominate Lance.

In an Internal Revenue Service investigative report issued last Friday, John Moore Jr., an Atlanta lawyer who was a member of President-elect Carter's transition team, is also quoted as saying Carter was briefed on the agreement.

Much flooding over Midwest

By The Associated Press

More than 100 persons were evacuated from a 20-block area of North Hastings, Neb., this morning as thunderstorm-spawned flash floods made life miserable in parts of Nebraska.

In North Hasting, flood waters entered at least 40 houses, and a nearby dam was being reinforced with sandbags.

Four inches of rain fell in one hour in Fairbury, Neb., Sunday night. Thundershowers stopped before daybreak, but were expected to resume today.

The Kansas City metropolitan area and parts of northwestern Missouri were also soaked by heavy rains from thunderstorms. Westwood, Kan., got almost six inches.

Flash flood warnings were in effect for parts of southern Nebraska,

Trying to reach Iceland

Balloonists will abort flight

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Two Americans attempting to cross the Atlantic in a balloon decided today to abort their troubled flight. Their ground crew said the two would attempt to reach Iceland, about 80 miles away, by nightfall.

At midmorning, a spokesman for the tracking station had said that radio contact had been lost and the balloon probably was down in 11-foot seas west of Iceland. However, before noon, he said the balloon was still airborne.

"The balloon doesn't have enough helium in it anymore," said Mike Leavitt. "If they stayed out tonight, the helium would cool off so much that they would be forced into the sea. They have thrown off all the ballast they can."

Leavitt said the U.S. Navy located the balloon 80 miles off the northwest corner of Iceland at midmorning. It had gained about 8,000 feet of altitude and pushed free of an air mass that had earlier kept the craft bobbing up and down above the sea.

The U.S. Air Force, in a dispatch from West Germany, said it had sent a rescue helicopter to the area. A spokesman in Washington said a patrol plane was following the balloon and had radio contact with the balloonists.

Air Force officials in Ramstein, West Germany, the European headquarters, said the crew members had reported they were running out of fuel.

The Air Force, which had an airplane from Iceland circling above the balloon, reported the men were wearing exposure suits and that the gondola was considered seaworthy.

Radio contact with the balloon had been lost Sunday afternoon, but was re-established early today.

Ben L. Abruzzo, 47, and Maxie L. Anderson, 44, lifted off just after sunset Friday from Marshfield, Mass., a coastal community south of Boston.

Hint U.S. moving toward PLO role in peace talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a further shift of its Middle East policy, is on the verge of asserting a need for Palestinian representation in Arab-Israeli peace talks.

The State Department will call soon for a Palestinian role at the Geneva conference the administration is trying to set up before the end of the year, sources said.

The move is being made despite the failure of the Palestinian Liberation Organization governing council to approve U.N. Security Council resolutions implicity recognizing Israel's right to exist.

The assertion that the Palestinians should be at the peace table would be made without specific reference to the PLO. At the same time, though, department officials are expected to again request that Yasir Arafat's organization support the U.N. resolutions, which also call for a peaceful settlement in the Middle East.

The administration move continues the process of cultivating the Palestinians, who President Carter has declared are entitled to a "homeland." This policy has caused anxiety in Israel and among its supporters. Israel considers the PLO, which is recognized by the Arab states as the sole representative of Palestinians, as a terrorist organization.

Earlier this summer, while touring the Middle East, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said the PLO no longer needs to change its covenant, which is committed to the dismantling of the Jewish state, provided it approves the U.N. resolutions 242, adopted in 1967, and 338, in 1973. Even so, the council at a subsequent meeting in Damascus refused to implicity recognize Israel and accused the United States as being part of a Zionist conspiracy.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan is due here within the week with a proposed Israeli peace agreement with the Arab states. Prime Minister Menahem Begin's government repeatedly has barred any talks with the PLO, its offices or members, but said Palestinians from the West Bank of the Jordan River could be at the peace table.

Upland police seek parents of two boys left at market

Upland police are seeking the parents of two young boys, answering to the name of Joseph and Mark, who were apparently abandoned at the Alpha Beta Market at 829 W. Foothill Blvd. Sunday night.

Police said the boys, aged 4 and 6, told store employes their father had left them at the store after giving them $10. The boys said their father had not returned for them.

Officers said the boys were unable to give their last names. Officers waited at the store for some time, and when the father still did not return the children were taken to the police station.

The boys were given hamburgers and other treats by the officers. "They sure were hungry. They gobbled up those hamburgers," said one officer.

The boys were turned over to the Child Protective Agency in San Bernardino today, pending further investigation.

Four hospitalized, 11 arrested in demonstration over busing plan

CHICAGO (AP) — Eleven persons were arrested and four others hospitalized, three in serious condition, in a demonstration by whites opposed to a voluntary school busing plan.

Ten of those arrested in Sunday night's incident were whites and all the injured were white. The 10 whites were arrested on a variety of charges ranging from disorderly conduct to failure to obey a police officer's order to disperse, police said.

The injured were struck in two separate accidents involving cars trying to pass through a street crowded with the Southwest Side demonstrators.

Authorities said two teen-aged girls and one teen-aged boy were taken to Holy Cross Hospital where both were listed in serious conditions.

Michael V. Smith, 22, a black, was arrested and charged with reckless driving, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, driving without a city sticker and not having state license plates, police said.

The fourth victim, an unidentified man, was injured in a separate accident in which the driver was not held. He was listed in fair condition at Christ Community Hospital, authorities said.

Police estimated the number of demonstrators at 1,000.

Authorities tried to cut off vehicular traffic feeding into the demonstration area, but before barricades were completed, some cars got through. Cars driven by blacks were pelted with stones, according to police.

"Some blacks just got by my blockade before I cut traffic off," said District Police Commander William Woods.

"They were attacked by white youths."

The school busing plan that went into effect this year involves transfering children from crowded buildings to less crowded facilities.

GAO claims cost below estimates

NEW YORK (AP) — The General Accounting Office estimates that legislation requiring 9.5 per cent of imported oil to be transported here in U.S. ships could cost consumers more than five times the amount estimated by the Carter administration, the New York Times said today.

In a story from Washington, the newspaper said that in a 44-page report dated last Friday, the GAO estimates an added cost of between $550 million and $610 million annually, a figure much higher than one made by the administration in July.

The legislation, proposed by the administration and approved Aug. 2 by the House Merchant Marine Committee, has drawn fire from Republicans as benefiting special interest groups in the maritime industry at great cost to consumers.

The GAO arrived at the high cost to consumers by calculating that the bill would raise transport costs by 0.2 cents per gallon. If the U.S. imports eight billion barrels of oil a day, the added cost would be $240 million, the GAO said.

However, if oil imports reach the 10.3 billion barrel per day level predicted by the agency for 1983, the cost would be $300 million.

Those figures are further inflated by the GAO contention that the American consumer will have to pay more for domestic oil as its price adjusts to the world market price.

'Roots' picks up nine Emmys

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Roots" gathered up nine Emmys in an awards show that made up for a four-month delay by being the longest in the 29-year history of the Television Academy.

The 12-hour mini-series seen on ABC last January won Emmys for best limited series, directing and writing, with acting awards going to Louis Gossett Jr., Edward Asner and Olivia Cole. The three remaining Emmys for "Roots" were in craft categories.

The Sunday night Emmy Awards Show on NBC, delayed four months by a squabble that split the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences into an Eastern National Academy and a Hollywood Academy, ran a record 3½ hours. It was 40 minutes longer than the privious longest show last year.

"As long as we're running over, let's do it good," said Angie Dickinson, who was co-host with Robert Blake for the ceremonies at the stately Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

The Hollywood Academy handed out Emmys in 42 prime time categories, with 27 Emmys going to ABC, 21 to NBC, 17 to CBS and eight to PBS.

"Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," won seven awards and tied with "Sybil" for outstanding dramatic special.

"Sybil" won four awards, inculding an award to star Sally Field, who was named best actress in a drama special for her protrayal of a woman afflicted by multiple personalities.

Dick Van Dyke's variety series, "Van Dyke and Co.," canceled by NBC last year after 11 performances, won as best variety series. "The Barry Manilow Special" was named outstanding variety special.

"I'm a little angry at NBC for preempting us so many times," said Van Dyke. "We even got letters asking us if we were doing a special."

Ed Flanders was named outstanding lead actor in a dramatic special for his feisty portrayal of the president in "Harry S. Truman: Plain Speaking."

Beatrice Arthur, going into her sixth year as "Maude," won her first Emmy as best lead actress in a comedy series. Carroll O'Connor, whose Archie Bunker is Maude's conservative counterpart, was named best actor in a comedy series for "All in the Family."

The retiring "Mary Tyler Moore Show" bowed out after seven years by capturing the Emmy as best comedy series. Its writers also won award for her farewell performance, and the Academy paid a special tribute to the show in excerpts dating back to its beginning.

James Garner won an Emmy as best dramatic series actor for his private eye-on-wry in "The Rockford Files," and Lindsay Wagner as best actress in a dramatic series for "The Bionic Woman."

Once again, Britain's "Upstairs, Downstairs" walked away with the award for the best dramatic series.

Christopher Plummer, playing a corrupt banker in "The Money Changers," took the Emmy for best lead actor in a limited series. Patty Duke Astin won as best lead actress for "Captains and the Kings."

Burgess Meredith, who played lawyer Joseph Welsh, was named best supporting actor in a special for "Tail Gunner Joe" about Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Diana Hyland, who died of cancer this spring, was named outstanding supporting actress in a drama special for "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble." Her award was accepted in an emotional outpouring by John Travolta, her close friend who played her son in the movie.

Beulah Bondi won as best actress in a single appearance for a part on "The Waltons." Louis Gossett Jr. was named best actor for an appearance in a series for part two of "Roots."

Other "Roots" winners including Edward Asner as outstanding supporting actor in a single appearance in a series for the opening episode of "Roots." Olivia Cole won as best supporting actress in a single performance in a series for the eighth and final chapter of "Roots."

Chinatown task force organized

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Saying their city is living under an "atmosphere of fear" because of extended warfare among Chinese youth gangs, officials have formed a special task force assigned to break up the gang fighting.

The police action was announced Sunday after an early morning, execution-style slaying of a reputed gang member at his home in the usually peaceful Richmond District.

Authorities believe the dead youth and a critically wounded companion were shot to avenge last week's shootings at a Chinatown restaurant in which five persons were killed and 11 injured.

The latest shooting prompted Mayor George Moscone and Police Chief Charles Gain to announce organization of the 15-member gang squad.

At a news conference Sunday Moscone said, "There can be no greater crisis than this. The gangs have put this city under an atmosphere of fear."

Gain said the unit's job would be to identify gang members and adults believed responsible for gang activity. The unit will remain intact "for as long as necessary — and it may take years."

The city has offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of those responsible for the Golden Dragon shooting, and $10,000 is being offered for Sunday's killing, Gain said.

Chinatown is where most of the gang-related extortion and gambling goes on, and where the majority of 44 other gang-related murders since 1969 have taken place, police said.

OPARC's new program begins today

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Ontario-Pomona Association for Retarded Citizens initiated a new program today.

The Independent Living Skills Center for adults with developmental disabilities began this morning when the fall session of OPARC Day School opened.

Also resuming again is the Early Intervention Program.

The living skills center will offer vocational training under the auspices of the Baldy View Regional Occupation Program (ROP), according to Don Hardy, OPARC president.

OPARC is one of 27 agencies in the state which are participating in a pilot project which teaches highly complex tasks to the more profoundly disabled.

The vocational training will incorporate the techniques of the "California, or Marc Gold, Project." OPARC has been successful with the techniques and has tested them for a year prior to implementing them in the vocational classes for the new ROP program.

The curriculum will include work skills, discipline and job-seeking training.

For the past several years, Chaffey College, in cooperation with OPARC, has provided independent living skills training for adults with developmental disabilities at the OPARC Day School.

The students learn self-help care, nutrition and health, meal preparation, sensory motor and preceptual motor training, adaptive physical education, horticulture and domestic sciences and communication.

Hetty Doesburg, day school principal, has on her staff Mrs. Donna Gerard, Upland, Mrs. Sally Hall, Cucamonga, Mrs. Kari Buchholz, Claremont, Mrs. Lilah Beer, La Verne, and Richard Bartlebaugh, Pomona.

The Early Intervention Program is designed for the developmentally disabled infant. Mrs. Judy Cook is coordinator for the program which trains the infant from birth to 3 years old. The purpose is to provide prescriptive programs for each infant to encourage his development and to provide for the part support and guidance in becoming paraprofessional therapists for their child.

Two other programs are included in the OPARC school agenda this fall

The Senior Companion Program is a county-sponsored effort to utilize the time, talent and interest of senior citizens in working with developmentally disabled persons on a one-to-one basis.

Mrs. Ida Haag, Mrs. Ruby Wilson and Leonard Smiley, senior companions, provide tutorial programs, remedial subjects and other training.

The second special program will be art oriented, with a focus on pottery making, directed by Mrs. Mary Wegener and Mrs. Sonja Gage.

OPARC's services will continue to include Diversified Industries, a career center for the vocationally disabled, with Fred Larson as general manager.

The agency also provides an information and referral service for individuals or groups concerned with the vocationally and developmentally handicapped.

Deputy hit by rock in Cucamonga melee

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

A West End Sheriff's deputy was struck with a thrown rock and a sheriff's car was fired on in the Northtown section of Cucamonga Sunday night, resulting in the arrest of seven persons in a tense three-hour disturbance.

Injured in the incident that began about 8:30 p.m. on Center Street just north of 24th Street was Sgt. Michael O'Rourke. O'Rourke suffered a head injury requiring several stitches. He was treated at San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland and later released. Escaping injury in an fusilade of gunfire was Deputy "Andy" Anderson.

The attack on the two deputies brought immediate response from additional sheriff's deputies, the California Highway Patrol, and numerous officers from Upland, Chino, Ontario, and Montclair police departments.

Deputy Anderson, at the scene of the disturbance, said he and Sgt. O'Rourke were questioning three men in the area about a report of "shots being fired. All of a sudden I saw O'Rourke go down and heard gunfire. I heard bullets ricochetting all over the place. I didn't know what had happened — if O'Rourke had been shot or what. I called in a 999 (code for officer down, need assistance," said Anderson.

Within minutes, police and highway patrol units sealed off the area, setting up roadblocks in the area of 24th, 25th and Center streets. The arrival of the additional officers sent numerous persons on the street scrambling for their houses.

Capt. Monte Davis, West End sheriff's station commander, said during the first few minutes after the shots were fired, a highway patrol officer manning a roadblock on Center Street reported several persons in a white car ran the roadblock and had bumped him with the car. The white car was surrounded by shotgun-carrying officers. The driver and passengers were arrested.

Meanwhile, several other highway patrol officers on 24th Street west of Center Street reported being pelted by rocks and other objects. But no injuries were reported.

The San Bernardino Special Weapons and Training detail (S.W.A.T.) team was called to the area when it was believed those firing the shots at the officers were barricaded in a home on Center Street just south of 24th Street, said Davis. S.W.A.T. team members and deputies finally broke into the home when no one came outside on the orders of deputies. A search of the home found it empty. A second home and a shed were also searched without turning up any snipers.

About 11:30 p.m. the area was declared secure and the officers returned to the regular duties.

Arrested in the incident were Jerry Angel Hernandez, 18, of 9776 Main St., Cucamonga, suspicion of rioting, interfering with officers and disturbing the peace; David Lino Montoya, 18, of 8860 Center St., Cucamonga, suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon (car) on an officer; David Madrigal, 19, of Cucamonga, suspicion of being drunk in public; and four juveniles for other charges. Deputies said the juveniles were released to their parents.

Jewish New Year celebration starts

The valley's Jewish residents will begin celebrating Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, at sundown today.

Rosh Hashanah marks the start of the solemn High Holy Days, the 10-day holiday for world Jewry which ends at sundown Sept. 22. The blowing of the shofar, the ram's horn, signals the end of Yom Kippur on that evening.

Services will begin this evening at Temple Beth Israel in Pomona and Temple Shalom in Ontario. Beth Israel will have services at 8 p.m. today, and at 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Temple Shalom will hold services at 7 tonight, and at 9 a.m. both Tuesday and Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Jews in Israel were starting to observe the New Year with prayers and picnics today. Police were on stepped-up alert against terrorist attacks.

Armed guards were posted outside some synagogues and at the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem, Judaism's holiest shrine.

Thousands gathered at the Wailing Wall to usher in the year 5738. Judaism follows a lunar calendar that — according to tradition — is calculated from the creation of the world, through all the generations listed in the Old Testament.

About 10,000 synagogues, some only temporary structures, were prepared for an estimated one million worshippers. The turnout was unusually high, according to Rabbinical authorities.

The increased price of temple seats in Israel — $150 in Tel Aviv's major temples — reflected the inflation-ridden economy that will continue to plague Israelis in the coming year.

Banker's daughter kidnaped; two held

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A pretty 19-year-old banker's daughter, kidnaped four days before from her college campus, was driven to North Carolina on Sunday and released unhurt after a $158,000 ransom was paid. Within hours, authorities arrested a man and a woman.

Annette Adams, a blonde Vanderbilt University coed from Maryville, Tenn., was reunited with her parents at the Burke County sheriff's office in Morganton, N.C., 300 miles east of here, before dawn.

Authorities said they recovered more than $148,000.

Soon she was back in her home town where her father, W.C. Adams, is president of The Bank of Maryville.

Her face was puffy and her eyes red from crying, but she said she was all right.

"I was not hurt," she said. "I was well treated. They did not bother me. They never threatened to hurt me at all.

"They moved me around a lot. I was blindfolded most of the time but I could usually tell where I was by leaks in the blindfold and such.

"I'd never seen them before but I'd know them if they walked up to me now.

"I'm glad to be home," she said.

Then she broke into tears.

Authorities arrested Shelby Ann Baker, 28, of Winter Haven, Fla., and Wayne Edward Garrity, 29, of Statesville, N.C.

The FBI said they would be arraigned on federal kidnaping charges.

The drama began in Nashville on Thursday night, and it unfolded over four tense days during which news organizations kept the story off the air and out of print. The FBI had said Miss Adams' abductors had threatened to kill her if they saw or heard news accounts.

Authorities said a man and a woman forced Miss Adams into a car outside the Sigma Nu fraternity house on the campus of Vanderbilt University on Thursday night.

She was released at 4:15 a.m. EDT Sunday — 56 hours and 25 minutes later — in the parking lot of a motel on Interstate 40 at Morganton.

She called police and her father from the motel — collect — and Adams and his wife, Anne, flew to Morganton to pick her up.

Five hours after Miss Adams' release, the FBI arrested the two following a chase down Interstate 40.

Miss Adams had told police the car she was in was a light blue American sedan with Florida license plates, and soon Burke County, N.C., officers were chasing a car east on Interstate 40 as Catawba County, N.C., officers headed toward it from the other direction.

The car swerved across the median, hit a guardrail and two persons fled afoot into a wooded area.

Authorities said Miss Baker and Garrity stole a second car and another chase began, ending near Conover when the auto crashed into a dumpster in the parking lot of a motel 44 miles from Morganton.

After they were reunited in Morganton, the Adams family came home by car and talked to reporters in their driveway.

Adams said that his daughter, who is enrolled in Vanderbilt's college of arts and sciences, told him she and the kidnapers had been traveling since Sunday night and had stayed at three or four motels.

The Catawba County sheriff's office said $148,090 was recovered. There was no explanation of the $1,910 discrepancy between that figure and the amount paid.

Adams was at a banking seminar in Chicago when the kidnaping occurred, and did not learn of it until he returned home at about 4 p.m. Friday. Mrs. Adams had taken the first telephoned ransom demand that morning. She talked to her daughter then and again at 8 p.m. Saturday.

There were five calls Friday and several Saturday, and in that time the Adamses made four payoff drops at night. The first three were apparently tests, and the unmarked money was not taken until the fourth drop, just before midnight Saturday.

One drop Friday was at a trailer park where the parents were directed after reporting as ordered to a Knoxville bus station. Another that night and two Saturday night were in a dark area along a busy Knoxville street.

Federal agents watched each drop, sometimes using an airplane with sophisticated nightvision gear. But they missed the actual pickup.

Hal Hardin, U.S. attorney in Nashville, said four students on the sidewalk outside the fraternity had seen Miss Adams forced into the car. One jotted down the license number. Police found the car had been stolen from a shopping center and recovered it Sunday in Nashville.

A university spokeswoman said Miss Adams, a member of Chi Omega sorority, had left a party at the fraternity and was unescorted.

Back home, Adans said, "We are deeply grateful to the press and news media for containing this thing until we were able to get our daughter back. We are all tired and very thankful."

80 redcaps dropped from Amtrak line

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting Tuesday, rail travelers along Amtrak's Northeast corridor between Washington and Boston will have to haul their own bags.

In a cost-cutting move, the rail corporation is dropping its last 80 redcaps at 10 stations on the route.

However, elderly or handicapped passengers will be able to get help if they call Amtrak in advance, a spokesman said.

Eliminating redcap jobs should save the ailing, quasipublic rail corporation $1.4 million in salaries and benefits, he added.

The 80 redcaps are among 180 railroad workers losing their jobs in the cutback, at a total savings of $3.3 million.

The decision to eliminate redcap service was made very reluctantly last week, said Thomas Ramsey, Amtrak's manager of stations in the Northeast corridor. He said he originally wanted to hire four more redcaps — two in Washington and two in Philadelphia — in the coming fiscal year.

However, a $4.2 million cut in his $22.4 million budget request forced a choice between redcap service or ticket sales personnel along the nation's most heavily-traveled rail sector, he said.

"One of our attempts was to keep lines at ticket counters the same length they are now," said Ramsey. "More of our customers benefit from that than from our redcap service."

Amtrak requested a federal appropriation of $534.1 million for fiscal 1978, but got $488.5 million.

Amtrak has already announced plans to eliminate about 22 daily trains from the 120 operated in the Northeast corridor, to reduce turbo service between Chicago and Milwaukee and to cut the number of runs made by about seven long-distance trains. It also wants to raise ticket prices next month by 3 to 5 per cent.

Elimination of the redcap service along the corridor means an end to a tradition begun around 1896, when, according to the Association of American Railroads, the New York Central Railroad began free attendant service at Grand Central Station.

The redcaps, who were non-salaried before 1973 and earned a fee on each bag carried, now are paid $48.80 a day.

Walnut schools win restraining order

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Walnut Valley school district is one of 12 rural Southern California districts to have won a temporary restraining order Friday which holds up for 10 days the distribution of $47 million in federal economic development funds in Los Angeles and San Diego counties.

District Supt. David Brown said this morning, "That really made my day Friday when I learned that we had won the restraining order."

The order, issued by U.S. District Court Judge Manuel Real, will provide time for the districts involved to present their case to the court, stating the applications for funding were designed so they ultimately discriminated against small rural districts serving county unincorporated area residents.

The $47 million allocation made available through the federal Economic Development Administration is the same kind of funds acquired by the Chino school district a year ago to build two elementary schools.

To understand the suit filed by Walnut Valley, Rowland, Whittier and nine other districts, one must understand that school district administration in the East is somewhat different than in California, said Brown.

In the East, districts are usually incorporated with cities or townships with only one or two large county districts left to maintain schools in unincorporated areas.

When federal guidelines were drawn up to implement the new $4 billion economic development spending package, district's serving unincorporated areas were required to serve at least 50 per cent of the county's unincorporated population.

The 12 rural districts, said Brown, have filed their suit alleging that this is unlawful. They contend that the rural districts serving unincorporated areas of Los Angeles County should have the same right as districts such as Pomona to sit down with the county or city administration and prioritize needs for a combined grant application.

Earlier this year, the Pomona school board and city council negotiated a grant application to request funds for a school district cafeteria and and a new city fire station.

Brown says that, although the City of Walnut is too small for such an application negotiation, the Walnut Valley district should be able to sit down with the county administration and collectively negotiate and prioritize a grant application.

The county had earlier refused to do so, said Brown, who accused the county administration of "hiding behind the regulations."

The economic development grants were originally created to supply additional monies to cities and counties for public works improvements. Only in the last two years have school districts been able to apply for funds under the grant procedures.

The most recent $4 billion allotment of funds through the Carter Administration had supposedly been redesigned to make the funds more available to school districts, said Brown.

GM unveils Cadillacs

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors today unveiled a special edition of its 1978 Cadillac Seville which, pound for pound, could be the most expensive offering in the domestic car lineup.

The price of the new car, unveiled at a national press preview, was not disclosed although unofficial estimates put it at $16,000 or more.

The base Seville sold for $13,359 in the 1977-model year and was due for a sizable jump, as were other U.S. cars in the 1978 model run. GM has announced most 1978 prices will average 5.7 per cent or more than $400 higher than comparable 1977 models.

Cadillac showed off its seven-model line, including the DeVille, Fleetwood, Eldorado and Seville. The lineup had no major exterior or interior changes, except in the special edition.

The special edition will have full wire wheels, specially styled exterior mouldings, two-tone shades of brown or black, and a plush interior package featuring a writing desk, folddown arm rests, rear floor courtesy lamps and provisions for a tape-recorder or telephone.

Also for Seville, Cadillac engineers have developed an electronic spark selection control that automatically advances or retards engine spark as needed, resulting in highway fuel economy of about one mile per gallon, the company said.

Pomonan arrested in kidnaping and rape case

A young Pomona man was arrested Sunday afternoon in connection with the kidnaping and rape of a teen-age girl, and the robbery later of several members of her family.

The incident began Friday night at Montvue Park, located at San Bernardino Avenue and Cordova Street. Two men approached the victim and her boyfriend there, one pulled a pistol and robbed the boyfriend before forcing the girl to accompany them to another area of the park. There the victim was attacked.

The girl later was forced to drive her boyfriend's car containing the two men to her parents' home nearby. The two abductors proceeded to rob her mother, father and two sisters while one held the pistol to the girl's head. Before fleeing, one fired a shot into the living room floor.

An intensive search of the neighborhood that night failed to turn up any suspects, but Sunday Senior Patrolman R.M. Tefank, of the major crimes task force, spotted 19-year-old Melvin Carr, of 1900 W. Orange Grove Ave., in the Five Points area of the city and took him into custody. He was booked on suspicion of kidnaping, rape, armed robbery, and burglary.

Carr had been identified as a suspect through the use of photos shown the victims, according to Sgt. R.H. Hargett, task force leader.

Pomonan victim of gunshots

Gunshots killed Pomona murder victim Fred E. Liggett, 39, a coroner's autopsy revealed today.

Liggett, who lived at 405 W. 11th St., was found dead on the sidewalk near his home the night of Sept. 4. No arrests have been made.

Police were unable to determine immediately if Liggett had been shot or stabbed. There were several small puncture wounds about his neck. An autopsy performed by county coroner's physicians revealed that the wounds were made by bullets, however.

"Death was due to massive hemorrhage caused by bullets which perforated both lungs," coroner's investigator James Kono said today.

Police said they have been unable to determine a motive for the killing.

Three hurt in traffic

Three persons were injured slightly in Sunday traffic accidents in Pomona and one motorist was arrested on a hit-run charge.

In that accident, Hugo A. Pina, 25, of Pomona, was accused of driving away after his car ran into the rear of another auto at Grand and Park avenues Sunday evening. Pina also was charged with failing to possess a driver's license.

The other driver, Jose D. Perez-Godinez, 46, of Pomona, suffered a nose injury, but declined medical treatment.

Passenger Mary Matchison, 60, of Pomona, was hurt Sunday evening when a car driven by Joseph A. Matchison, 63, was involved in a collision at Mission Boulevard and the Corona Expressway. Matchison and the other driver involved, Sherry M. Levigne Sharp, 31, escaped injury.

O'Donnell rites

Day of the Boston wake gone forever

BOSTON (AP) — There's a bit of the Irish left, but the day of the grand Boston political wake is gone, forever.

"The wake . . . it's a disappearing phenomenon, like the derby hat," says Frank Skeffington in the novel, "The Last Hurrah," Edwin O'Connor's thinly disguised portrait of Boston's old Irish politicians.

It was a far cry from even "The Last Hurrah" Saturday and Sunday at McNamara's Funeral Home, across the road from Hannigan's Market and Minihane's Flower Shop.

There the relatives and the friends quietly paid their respects to Kenneth P. O'Donnell, White House appointments secretary to John F. Kennedy and one of the inner circle known in those days as the "Irish Mafia." O'Donnell died Friday at the age of 53.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will eulogize his brother's adviser today at a funeral mass.

The flavor of the old days, when wakes were held at home, the corpse in the front parlor, the Irish whisky in the back kitchen, was tantalizingly brief, as when Albert "Dapper" O'Neil, a Boston city councilor appeared in his powder blue suit with matching necktie.

"I can't thank you enough," said a political parishioner who moved over to pump Dapper's hand gratefully, "for that water meter you put in my cellar."

Dapper let the man walk away before he raised his bushy white eyebrows quizzically and said:

"I didn't know I put in his water meter."

In the old days, there would have been the governor and the mayor and, most certainly, the cardinal.

But not this time. Virtually none of the state's big-time politicians, other than Kennedy, appeared at the wake.

"Cushing would have come," said undertaker Robert R. McNamara about the late Richard Cardinal Cushing, the town's last Irish prelate. "But not this man. It's not the same."

Humberto Cardinal Medeiros came from Massachusetts' large Portuguese population. His relations with the Irish community are strained.

"Wake politics is ward politics," explained O'Donnell's White House sidekick, Dave Powers. "Kennedy was a national politician."

Another moment reminiscent of the past belonged to retired Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, 85, who paused before O'Donnell's body and then crossed the hall to shake hands with those at another wake.

"A doubleheader," said Power remembering the days when television and radio did not exist, and wakes were for quiet campaigning.

There was hardly a mention of Bert Lance, and the Washington of Georgian Jimmy Carter seemed far away from McNamara's. The hum of small talk and affectionate laughter colored the atmosphere with a party air, except for the stark presence in an American flag-draped coffin against the bank of flowers at one end of the room of the body of O'Donnell. A PT 109 pin clipped to his red-and-blue striped tie marked his identification to the last with Kennedy, the PT boat commander-hero whom he started to serve in 1946 during his first run for Congress.

For thirsty members of the crowd, there was hot coffee from the ice cream parlor next door. There was no food, as in the day of the parlor wake.

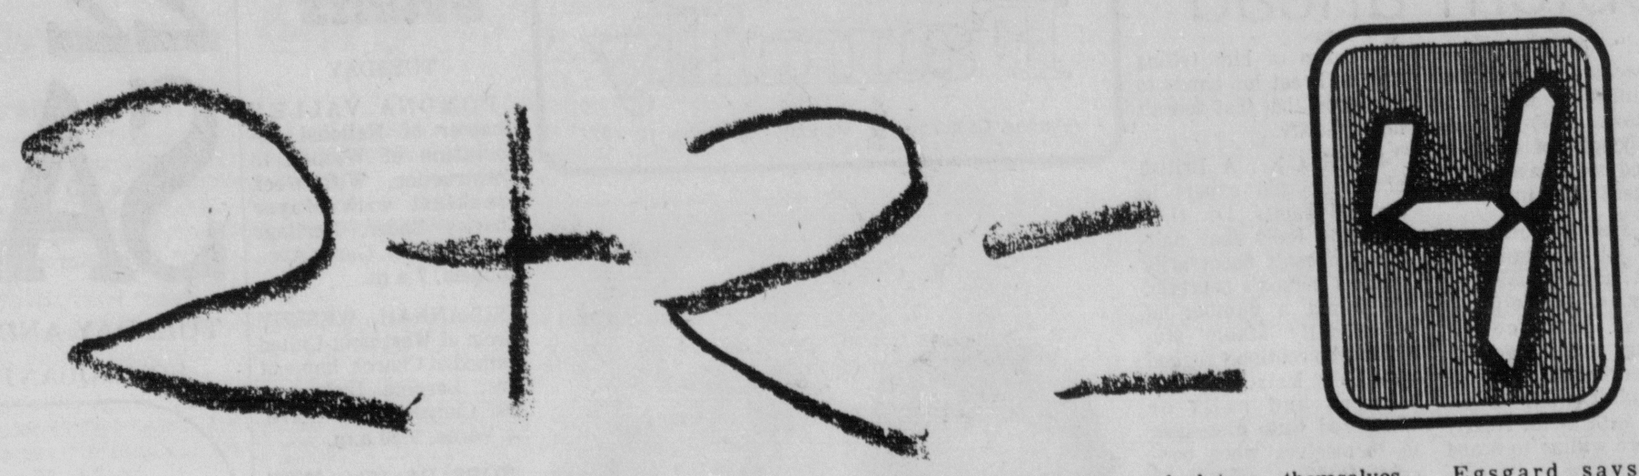
Classroom calculators: electronic wizardry is replacing simple skill



By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The pocket calculator has invaded the classroom, overcoming opposition from some parents and educators who fear that electronic wizardry will replace simple mathematical skill.

Retailers advertise — and parents buy — "Back to School" specials, not only for the college student, but for his younger brothers and sisters. Prices for the simpler models are under $10.

In a 1976 study for the National Science Foundation, Marilyn N. Suydam, director of a federally funded Calculator Information Center at Ohio State University, estimated that between 25 and 50 per cent of U.S. schools used calculators to some degree.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress, a project of the Education Commission of the States, will include a calculator section next year in its second, full-scale test of students' math skill at ages 9, 13 and 17.

"We have a whole test booklet using the calculator throughout," says Jane Armstrong, math coordinator for the testing group.

Using calculators was never even discussed when the group first tested math ability in a 1972-73 survey. But this year, math educators around the country said that calculators were a must.

The National Council of Teachers of Mathematics has endorsed the use of calculators in class. At what age level? Council President John C. Egsgard says, "We're only going to know by trying."

Egsgard and other teachers say children will need to learn fundamentals — addition, subtraction, multiplication, division — so they understand the principles involved. You need the basics to make the calculator do what you want it to.

At a higher level, says Egsgard, who teaches grades nine through 12, he still wants his students to learn how to find the square root of a number, using paper and pencil, so they understand the concept.

Youngsters who were turned off by the boredom of dozens of repetition problems may gain new interest in mathematical concepts and the uses of numbers. "People are going to enjoy math because the drudgery is gone," says one teacher.

Both the National Institute of Education and the National Science Foundation are considering proposals for research projects into new ways of using calculators. Such projects might include an exploration of whether a calculator can be used to help a child learn to count or whether computation of decimals can be introduced at an early age.

Miss Suydam says there have been about 20 studies of varying quality into the effects of calculators on children.

Most have centered on whether use of the calculator impairs the child's ability to understand such things as multiplication and addition, and Miss Suydam says most of the data "looks positive. The achievement level ieat least as good or better" as among children who have not been exposed to calculators.

The positive effect of calculators — whether they help children learn more — is unmeasured because their use in the classroom is too new for long-range studies. But, Miss Suydam says, "Some evidence is beginning to surface that ... you can use the calculator as the first step and then develop the meaning."

Some educators believe handheld calculators can be used as early as kindergarten to introduce children to numbers. Others would wait until junior high or high school. Still others would allow the use of a calculator only to check problems and eliminate routine computation; they would ban them from tests.

Almost all agree, however, that like it or not, there's no way to stop the calculators. "Even though you tell the kids not to use the calculator at school, they've got the things at home," says Egsgard. A survey last year by a market research firm showed that 43 per cent of American homes had a calculator and that the number is growing. Many families have more than one.

Industry sources estimate that 1977 sales of four-function personal calculators — the kind you use to balance your checkbook, figure your income tax or add up the grocery bill — will top $300 million. They say that by the end of this year, almost 73 million hand-held calculators will have been sold. If they all were still in use, that would come to about one calculator for every three Americans.

In her study, Miss Suydam wrote that as teachers and parents use calculators themselves, their reluctance to the use of computers in the classroom is likely to diminish.

Will children unfamiliar with calculators be at a disadvantage?

No, says Miss Armstrong of the National Assessment of Educational Progress. In preliminary trials this year for the agency's full-scale test in 1978, educators found that even students who had never used calculators before could handle them successfully after about five minutes of instruction.

Egsgard says the calculator can stimulate slow students because it gives them a chance to solve interesting problems, even if they still have trouble with basic arithmetic. Once they have regained interest in math, the students are more likely to be able to learn rudimentary skills. "There's nothing better than giving them something that will make them successful," he says.

Joyce Brothers
Sees problem ahead

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I'm a homosexual and have been living with the same man for 15 years. He's a brilliant teacher and will be moving to a university in the Midwest. I'm an artist and can work almost anywhere so I don't mind making the move with him. What troubles me is that as a native Midwesterner, I know that in that section of the country there's less tolerance toward sexual behavior that doesn't fit what's considered "normal." I've tried to warn my friend that he may have to go back into the closet if he wants to keep his job. He says I don't realize there have been changes in people's thinking in the past decade. He has more faith than I and I worry for him. — S.B.

DEAR S.B.: The results of a national opinion poll by Indiana University's Institute for Sex Research would tend to confirm your fears. There is still a tremendous fear and prejudice about homosexuality.

For instance, two-thirds of the 3,000 adults polled regarded homosexuality as "very obscene and vulgar." Thirty-four per cent would put homosexuals either in jail or on probation. Sixty-five per cent thought of them as sick and badly in need of a treatment program.

The vast majority endorsed job discrimination against homosexuals, especially in the clergy, in medical practice, in teaching, and in government service. About 80 per cent didn't want to associate with them. Nearly half were willing to brand homosexuality as "a corruption that can cuase the downfall of a civilization." Accordint to psychologists Eugene Levitt and Albert Klassen, Jr., who conducted the survey, they tended to be white residents of the Midwest or South.

Perhaps your friend should consider this information before making any firm decisions.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Our 16-year-old son seems to be a well-adjusted, healthy young man, but he worries us because he bites his nails when he's concentrating. He has almost no other bad habits. He doesn't smoke, drink or use drugs. He's a good student but very nervous. Should we worry about his nail-biting? I make fun of him telling him he'll eat his hands to the elbow, but that doesn't help. — C.N.

DEAR C.N.: A British professor and expert in nervous habits, Dr. D.G. Williams feels that nail-biting doesn't necessarily mean a person's neurotic. He found a number of emotionally stable students who routinely tugged at their hair, chewed fingers and nails or whispered little messages to themselves when concentrating.

Concentration of manipulation in head and hand regions suggests, he says, that activities are performed, at least partly, because of the feedback stimulation they provide. Men seem to be a bit more active in the squirming, biting habits the women, he noted.

Nail-biting in itself can't be regarded as a sign of emotional disturbance. However, a University of California study found that many nail-biters were filled with pent-up resentment and hostility resulting from inner tension.

I suggest you don't make fun of your son, but try to talk to him about why he does this. Ask if he's aware of any anger or resentment that he's bottling up. If he is, encourage him to talk it out.

Try to find out how he feels about failure. He may be repressing fears about this. Remind him that in order to develop new insights and new ideas one has to be willing to risk some failure. Failure often opens the door to new, innovative ideas. Make sure that you and your wife aren't applying too much pressure to achieve. Let him go at his own pace.

For medicinal purposes only

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beer, according to an Assyrian tablet of 2,000 B.C., was one of the foods that sustained passengers on the biblical Noah's legendary Ark.

The United States Brewers Association says the tablet is the first recorded mention of the brew, which has been credited with healing powers throughout history.

Saxons, according to the association, used beer, warmed and blended with medicinal roots, to cure hiccups. Syrians used beer to induce relaxation and Arabs used it in bread as a leavening agent. Today, the drink is part of a multitude of recipes of all kinds.

Tri-Community cities hunting a name

What's in a name?

Shakespeare's feeling on the subject notwithstanding, proponents of incorporating Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda are looking for a new name for that new city.

Although all three of the existing communities will keep their identities, say backers of the incorporation effort, an overall city name will be needed.

Voters in the November election will have only one name to choose from: Rancho Cucamonga.

But proponents of incorporation say it doesn't have to remain that.

To come up with alternatives, assuming voters want an alternative, the Tri-Community Incorporation Committee will sponsor a "Name Our New City Contest."

The move is not without precedent in the valley.

Montclair was incorporated in 1956 as Monte Vista. When it was later learned another Monte Vista, California already existed, voters selected Montclair as their city's name over Montevideo, La Vista, Orchard and San Antonio.

Jack Benny's famous line of "Azusa, Anaheim and Cucamonga" has been selected as the inspiration for contest prizes.

Among the prizes will be a day for four at Disneyland in Anaheim, or dinner for two at the Canyon Inn in Azusa. Contest sponsors said they will dream up other prizes, awards and honors as well.

Entries may be mailed to the committee at Box 321, Alta Loma, Cal. 91701, or they may be placed in a special box located at the county service building at 9161 Base Line Road.

Deadline for submission of entries is Oct. 1. Announcement of selected winning entries, which would be put before the voters at a later date, will be made in mid-October.

Each entry should include the individual's name, address and phone.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, plagued by investor fears of higher interest rates, headed sharply lower along a broad front Monday. Trading was moderately active.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which plunged 11.09 points Friday, was off 4.24 points to 852.83 shortly before noon EDT. The closely watched average fell 15.24 points overall last week.

Analysts said the early selling was a continuation of Friday's rout that was sparked by Federal Reserve Board credit tightening in light of a surprising $3 billion jump in the nation's basic money supply.

The money supply has surged at an inflationary rate the past four months, forcing the Fed to take credit tightening steps. This could force short-term interest rates higher and hinder the economy, which already has slowed won.

As a result, declines outnumbered advances, 765 to 361, among the 1,613 issues crossing the tape.

New York Stock Exchange volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 8,000,000 shares, compared with 8,640,000 traded during the corresponding period Friday.

International Telephone & Telegraph was the most active NYSE issue, off 7/8 to 30 3/8. ITT preferred N stock followed, off 5/8 to 38 1/8. Brunswick Corp. was the third most active NYSE issue, off 5/8 to 12 5/8.

Mattel was off 5/8 after the company reported second-quarter operating earnings of 24 cents a share, compared with 25 cents a year ago.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. International Systems & Controls, which Friday said it was paring operations to concentrate on its marketing capabilities and to reduce overhead, was ahead 1 1/4 in active trading.

Bank develops new system

LOS ANGELES — Bank of America's corporate agency division announced the development of a new computerized bond coupon processing system to expedite principal and interest payments to bondholders.

The system is designed primarily for medium-size and large corporations and municipalities that name the bank as paying agent for bearer securities, such as corporate and municipal bonds and coupons.

"The primary purpose of the system," said Nicholas J. Caputo, vice president and head of the division, "is to make payment more promptly on bonds and coupons as they are submitted."

Caputo said the bank handles payments for nearly five million bonds and coupons annually or an average of approximately 20,000 per working day. "Automation is vital to maintaining our present customer base as well as expanding it," he said.

JOSEPH J. JACOBS

Jacobs' role at college honored

Harvey Mudd College honors two of its friends, a trustee and his wife, who are major donors to the college's current Campaign/25, by dedicating a building in their name on Tuesday.

The persons being publicly recognized are Joseph J. Jacobs, chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer of Jacobs Engineering Group Inc., Pasadena, and his wife, Violet Jacobs.

The building is the college's first laboratory building, completed in 1961, which has since been completely renovated and refurbished. It now becomes the Jacobs Science Center.

Jacobs, an engineer who founded a worldwide firm of designers, consultants, engineers, and constructors, and Mrs. Jacobs, became interested in the college of engineering and science at Claremont in the early 1970s.

They established a scholarship fund in 1972 and have contributed to it since. In 1973 Jacobs was made a trustee of the college.

When Campaign/25 was launched in the spring of 1976, the Jacobs were among the first of major donors. That support takes many forms, $1 million in endowment, continued scholarship aid, and checks and pledges to match campaign contributions made by alumni, faculty, and staff.

The informal ceremony honoring Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs will include participants Henry T. Mudd, chairman of the board; D. Kenneth Baker, president; and Joseph M. Burkholder of the class of 1978, student body president. Following the exercises there will be a reception and luncheon for invited guests at the president's house.

Store sales rise 10.1% in August

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc. (NYSE) reported sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 27 were $101.7 million, an increase of 10.1 per cent over the $92.4 million of August 1976.

Sales for the first seven months of fiscal 1977 were $734.4 million, an increase of 7.6 per cent over the $682.6 million for the like period of 1976.

Philip M. Hawley, president, said that early consumer response to fall fashions, as reflected in the August sales, was very encouraging. There has been a strong consumer interest in women's dresses and skirts.

Brisk sales were reported in women's fashion accessories, including shoes, Hawley said. There was continued strength in goods for the home, particularly textiles for the bedroom and bath.

The company is a major retailer of apparel, accessories, home furnishings, books and gifts through general and specialty department stores, book stores and mail order catalogs.

Laboratory achieves new highs

Data-Design Laboratories in Cucamonga achieved new highs in sales and earnings in fiscal 1977, exceeding the previous records set last year, said Thomas C. Beiseker, president and chief executive officer.

He said that sales and net income in the fourth quarter also established new quarterly highs and were slightly ahead of last year's record final quarter.

For the year ended June 30, sales increased 12 per cent to $25,357,000 from $22,700,000 in the prior fiscal year. Net income was up 17 per cent to $964,000, equal to 89 cents per common share from $825,000 or 80 cents a share last year.

Fourth quarter sales totaled $7,484,000, compared with $7,383,000, and net income was $445,000 versus $435,000 one year ago.

Beauty wins over bureaucracy in Claremont City Hall battle

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Staff Writer

Claremont's classic combat between sculpture and City Hall is apparently over with beauty winning over bureaucracy.

Folk music store owner Charles Chase, who adorns his 12th Street home lawn with vertical and horizontal wood sculpture and logs, has been the center of a controversy for three months.

After two anonymous complaints from neighbors were received at City Hall, Gary Richards, community development enforcement officer, declared that natural logs and sculpted logs that Chase had sat upright on his front lawn were sculpture.

But, according to Richards, those debarked logs placed horizontally on the lawn were not and would have to go.

Chase refused to move them, declaring that 90 degrees from the vertical does not mean a naturally sculpted piece of wood is not sculpture.

More forceful letters were received by Chase from City Hall. The last letter demanded the logs be removed or legal action would follow.

Chase not only failed to comply, but picketed City Hall in retalitation. He charged the city was biased against sculptors.

A hiatus of more than a month was taken by both sides, as each marshaled forces.

Finally, a compromise was reached between Chase and city officials. If Chase could obtain a letter from another artist stating the logs laying horizontally in his yard were art the city would back off, said officials.

Mike Hill, an artist and artisan who works in stained glass and operates Crystals in Glass in Claremont Village, provided such a letter.

In a letter received at City Hall, Hill stated:

"Having worked extensively in wood gives me a deep appreciation of Mr. Chase's log sculptures. They seem to be a direct expression of the artist's love of natural forms and materials. They make a simple yet powerful statement. Why would it be necessary to alter further these logs to qualify them as sculpture?

"You could categorize these works as being Minimalist in form, however, I prefer to simply call them ART!"

Also aiding Chase's cause was a 14-year-old neighborhood boy who obtained a score of signatures on a petition which stated Chase's logs were looked at by most neighbors as art.

Chase, who chastized the city for not displaying sculpture on public property, said he now feels vindicated.

CONTROVERSY ENDS

Due to recent storm

Valley hit by outbreak of fleas

The valley has dried out from Hurricane Doreen which passed through three weeks ago. And along with the dryout has come a flyout of fleas.

Several valley veterinarians report they have seen a huge increase in canine and feline reactions to flea bites, mainly among older cats and dogs.

The storm's moisture has caused dormant flea eggs to hatch. One Claremont veterinarian likened the infestation to another last September when an unseasonal rain caused a similar hatching of eggs. Last year's outbreak was worse than this year's, he said.

Older cats and dogs especially are more susceptible to fleas because they build up an allergy to bites. "One bite can trigger a reaction which makes them itch all over," the veterinarian said. "Flea saliva is the culprit," he said.

To combat the new outbreak of fleas, a three-pronged attack is necessary, he said. The yard must be sprayed to kill fleas in the lawn, the home and furniture thoroughly vacuumed and possibly fumigated, and the dog or cat liberally doused with either flea powder or spray, he said. Commercial dips are available and home fogging spray cans are on sale at nurseries, he said.

Profile: Chino's Santo still looking for answers

DAN SANTO

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Dan Santo is fighting hard these days to get inside an "octopus."

The "octopus" he's referring to is the Chino Unified School District.

Santo, a new school board member elected last March, has found it difficult to get answers to his questions about the district. He sometimes feels like he's wading through a mass of tentacles.

The brash, extroverted Santo who often livens up a school board meeting, said in a recent interview that problems with obtaining information has been the "biggest surprise" for him since he joined the board.

"I'm amazed at the amount of information people don't receive about education," he said. "Educators are a very closed society — it's like beating yourself against the wall to get information."

Santo indicates that if a school board member like himself has problems getting answers, then imagine what the average district resident has to go through.

The educational system has "defense mechanisms," he said. "They resist change. It's a closed situation — there's an ivory tower up there."

Santo, 39, says he has discovered there is a "a lot going on. I'm not saying there's any hanky panky or wrongdoing — but there are things they (educators) don't think of telling you."

For example, Santo said, administrators "toss a budget at you and say, 'Here, pass it.' "

(Chino schools Supt. Duane Stiff, asked to respond to Santo's statements, said he "had no intention of commenting on the remarks. I don't know what he's referring to. I don't know what he means by those statements.")

Santo promises to "shake up" the bureaucracy during his tenure on the board. "We have to take the cobwebs out. I feel it's something that has to be looked at — in fact, it needs a kick in the pants."

Despite the problems he's encountered, Santo enjoys being a board member. "The animal (the district) is very complex but I enjoy it."

Santo, a newcomer to Chino who has only lived in the district for 20 months, has always been a "joiner" and ran for the school board after his children became involved in school programs such as Future Farmers of America.

A contract negotiator for Teledyne-Inet in Gardena, Santo said he was interested in "what kind of school programs were being offered" and decided to run for the board.

Santo became part of a pro year-round school slate, and says he still favors the controversial program. He believes he was elected because "people wanted some new blood" on the board and he excelled at the candidate forums.

Santo emphasized a "constructive approach" to solving educational problems and claimed he wanted to be part of a "can do" board.

The district was in the midst of a heated controversy over year-round school, and Santo's election tipped the balance in favor of those wanting to keep the YRS program.

"I'm still a proponent of YRS," he says. "I like the continuity in education, and the fact buildings are not standing empty for three months."

The YRS issue has become somewhat defused in recent months, but Santo has been involved in discussions of other important issues — such as the selection of a new superintendent and the teachers' contract.

He tends to liven up serious discussions at school board meetings. "I'm not a quiet person," he says, "and that's probably the understatement of the year."

"Whatever I do, I attack it. I get into things wholeheartedly."

He prides himself on his quick delivery of "one-liners." He says it's easier to communicate that way — "you don't have to be super serious about everything."

Santo claims he is not putting on a show or trying to be a "smart Alec. It's just my way of communicating."

He admits that he likes to "deflate pomposity" during serious proceedings.

He recently commented that he felt like he'd been to the "Mad Hatter's Tea Party" after viewing a constantly changing school budget.

Santo once hinted that school documents should be kept simple. "K.I.S.S. should be the byword — keep it simple, stupid."

Government is just too rigid, he said. "It must be brought closer to the people."

And that's what Dan Santo will be trying to accomplish in the coming months.

Schulte selected Valencia principal

Roger J. Schulte has been named as the new principal of Valencia Elementary School in Upland, replacing Dick Riley.

The Upland school board confirmed the appointment of Schulte at a recent meeting. He has been serving as an acting principal in the Moraga School District in Northern California.

Schulte's appointment completes a number of reassignments of principals. Riley was reassigned as principal at Pioneer Junior High School, leaving the opening at Valencia.

Schulte, 33, who had also served as an assistant principal and English teacher in the Moraga district, holds a bachelor's degree from UC Davis and a master's from Stanford.

He is married and has two children.

Immunization idea: gifts for children

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

In a concentrated effort to assure that all children entering school for the first time are immunized, the Pomona Health Center will have gifts for the youngsters at an evening clinic scheduled Wednesday.

Free drinking cups will be given to each child receiving immunizations for polio, measles, diphtheria, tetanus, rubella, pertussis and mumps at the Pomona center of the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, 750 S. Park Ave., from 5 to 7 p.m.

The cups, donated by a local firm, are heavy plastic designed with Disney characters and come in four colors.

Another free clinic, slated on Oct. 12, from 5 to 7 p.m., will also include the cup offer.

All children enrolling in schools in California for the first time this year must present evidence of immunization against polio, measles, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

The only children who are exempt are those whose parents have filed signed doctors' statements that immunization is not medically recommended or that immunization is against the parents personal beliefs.

Children who cannot produce evidence of immunizations may be enrolled only on a conditional basis. Immunizations are being offered at all public health clinics this month and can also be obtained at the family's personal physician.

In recent years, the percentage of children immunized against preventable childhood diseases has been declining. This decline was blamed for a serious epidemic of measles in the Southland during the past school year.

Dr. William H. Foege, director of the Center for Disease Control, said recently that the drop in childhood diseases that followed the introduction of vaccines resulted in a fading of interest in vaccinations.

The county health department will conduct spot checks at schools this autumn to see that all districts are complying with the department's immunization requirements.

Children must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian. All previous immunization records should be brought to the clinic for review by the staff.

Additional information, including instructions in Spanish, are available by calling 623-6811, ext. 528.

Most valley students begin school today

Most of the valley's 100,000 public school students returned to classes this morning for another year.

Bonita, Chaffey, Claremont, Alta Loma, Upland, Central, Walnut and Ontario-Montclair school districts opened their classroom doors to students today.

Chino, a district on the year-round school system, started classes on July 1 for elementary and junior high students. High school students, however, returned today.

Students in the Pomona Unified School District will not start school until Wednesday because of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, which begins tonight.

Carport damaged by $1,000 blaze

The cause of a fire which caused $1,000 damage to an apartment carport Saturday noon is under investigation today by Pomona Fire Department inspectors.

The fire, of incendiary nature, was at the apartment complex owned and managed by John Williams, 1900 W. Orange Grove Ave., Pomona.

The carport was empty at the time

Cal Poly's May honored

"I felt some skepticism when I walked out onto the floor, but feel that I did prove my ability to referee to everyone's satisfaction," Darlene May recalls.

Miss May is the first woman to ever referee in an international basketball contest. She served as an official during the recent World University Games in Sofia, Bulgaria.

Not only did Miss May referee several women's international games, she was the official at a game between men's teams from France and Italy on Aug. 26.

The assistant athletic director and head coach for women's basketball and softball teams at Cal Poly Pomona, Miss May was recently presented a trophy by the Cal Poly Associates in recognition of the attention she has focused on the university.

She was licensed by the International Federation of Basketball Associations two years ago, the first woman to be so recognized.

Miss May has twice officiated at the finals of the U.S. Women's Collegiate Tournament and referred all five contests played by the People's Republic of China women's team during a U.S. tour in 1975.

While she enjoyed the opportunity to referee at six games in Bulgaria during the August competition, Miss May said she is glad to be back in the United States.

"But I think I've proved to the rest of the world that American women are capable of officiating in these tournaments in the future."

Neighborhoods come first

There is a new wave of thinking about urban problems — which shouldn't be too surprising since the old ideas left us in the mess we find in cities like New York, Detroit and Cleveland.

All of us know the signs of urban trouble: ghost towns downtown, thriving suburbs, decaying inner city neighborhoods, poisonous big city taxes, city budgets strapped and teetering on the edges of bankruptcy.

The old thinking went this way: What inner cities need most is more tax money so the wise city fathers can gather it to spend on city aging problems that we call crime, broken down public facilities, rising welfare costs and slums. So bring in business and industry for more valuable property to tax.

The easiest way is to boost downtown and the old theory maintains that if downtown is a snappy and attractive place, then people will want to live in the big city neighborhoods, there'll be money to pay for the poor and thus the rest of the city will take care of itself.

So it's malls and mini-parks and parking lots and downtown slum removal and parking structures and slabby high rises and underground parking garages. And pretty soon we're left with acres of asphalt and canyons of high rises and skid rows that, like blobs of mercury when you touch them, just move on to destroy another neighborhood.

The new wave is the opposite — neighborhoods first and the downtown second. Take care of the neighborhoods and you have a stable, attractive city with happy people and that keeps costs down, tax base high and draws business like a magnet.

These are not either-or views. But most city councils across the nation can be broken down in terms of which side of the argument they support. The old theory has been in vogue for many years and the new theory is gaining political muscle.

This new strength grows from at least three forces:

— The death throes of economies of scale. The old idea was that if you had more customers, you could do things cheaper for all concerned. It is true up to a point. That point is where things begin to get hideously expensive.

Inner cities pushed for metro-area solutions when it didn't cost too much. But a new nuclear economy-of-scale power plant is now over a billion dollars. Power rates are galloping upward. The costs for them are spread across a metro area or even a state, with the inner city (which already has lines up and power plants working) picking up an enormous amount of the tab so that growth can take place in the suburbs and out-state.

The inner cities are beginning to view themselves as being ripped off so that a thousand suburbs may bloom. This encourages city residents to band together and fight.

—Populism. It is beginning to rouse its shaggy head again with suspicion of big government and big business, a belief in the honesty, good sense and ability of the common man and an attempt to regain control over faceless bureaucracies. It is a sense of throwing us into the arms of the people and tearing us away from the arms of the experts.

— The energy crisis. In the years ahead, living in cities looks like it may be less expensive than in the high cost, energy-dependent suburbs.

Any city politician who stops to think more than five minutes about all this recognizes the key point: People who vote live in the neighborhoods and not on downtown parking lots.

Many city residents feel they cannot go on leaving the future in the hands of the professionals downtown, considering the way the urban ball has been fumbled.

Brown dodges tough questions

Because he hasn't come flat out and said so, don't harbor the notion that Gov. Jerry Brown has not decided on whether to run for re-election. On the contrary, he's running and running hard.

While he's flitting around the state, participating in staged media events, the governor appears to be satisfying inquiries from local press representatives.

But Gov. Brown is dodging the capitol press corps. They are the reporters who are more familiar with the issues, they know how our political world works, and they know what and when to ask the hard questions.

Not since last Feb. 3, when Gov. Brown held his last formal news conference in Sacramento, have the capitol reporters had a chance to ask the governor the tough questions. It's very difficult for them to ask penetrating questions when they have to catch the governor on the run in a hallway or an elevator.

When Jerry Brown ran for governor he promised openness in government. He's failed in that respect, miserably, just as he has faulted on finding solutions to the many problems facing California and its 20 million residents.

Using the 'big lie'

Dear Editor:

The opponents of the Panama Canal Treaty are just playing politics with this treaty. They have taken to using the "Big Lie" just as Joe McCarthy did, in order to drum up support for their position. They use highly emotional arguments but they don't tell the truth.

They don't tell that U.S. ships will continue to have access to the canal to the same extent they do now. They skip over the fact that the U.S. will have the right to defend the canal forever according to the treaty. No mention is made that the rejection of the treaty could lead to a war like Vietnam.

Men like Reagan who lust for power, and a segregationist like Strom Thurmond, with such groups as the Birchers, the KKK and a host of what can only be called "fascists" are not very credible. Should we not heed the voices of both Presidents Ford and Carter instead? If we don't the alternative is sickening.

The Letelier murder case

WASHINGTON — The man behind the murder of Chilean exile leader Orlando Letelier, as federal investigators have pieced together the mystery, is probably Chile's shadowy secret police chief, Manuel Contreras Sepulveda.

In one of the most complicated investigations since Watergate, FBI sleuths have traced the man who ordered the killing to Contreras' office in Santiago, Chile. They are not yet certain, however, whether Contreras himself gave the order or whether it came from a top aide.

Most federal sources believe the murder could not have been carried out without Contreras' direct approval. In fact, some Justice Dept. sources speculate that Chilean President Augusto Pinochet himself personally suggested the assassination.

No one working on the case will comment directly. But we have learned that the FBI has stepped up its activity among terrorists in Miami and hopes to resolve the case in the near future, complete with the names of the actual assassins.

Letelier was killed by a bomb, which was attached beneath his Chevrolet. The bomb exploded last September 21 as he was driving down Washington's tranquil Embassy Row with two American colleagues, Mike and Ronnie Moffitt.

The blast killed Letelier and Mrs. Moffitt but miraculously spared her husband. Afterward, an anguished Mike Moffitt begged us to investigate the bombing. We have kept in close touch, therefore, with the federal investigation.

Within a few weeks, we were able to identify Chile's notorious secret police, known by the dread initials DINA, as the probable culprits. Now we can describe the murder plot.

We are told that Pinochet expressed his displeasure with Letelier to the DINA chief. We have reason to believe that Contreras, in response to the Chilean president's wishes, dispatched a DINA officer to the United States to meet with two leaders of Brigade 2506, an organization of Bay of Pigs veterans.

Some members of the brigade, trained in violence by the CIA, allegedly have become right-wing terrorists. The DINA agent was put in touch with them, according to our sources, by a Chilean diplomat in the United States, who secretly works for DINA.

We reached the diplomat who reportedly has been interrogated by U.S. authorities. At first, he told us through an interpretor that the affair was his "private problem." Then he refused to comment; then his aide told us the charge was "ridiculous."

Investigators tell us, however, the two brigade leaders contacted among others a Cuban demolitions expert, Guillermo Novo, in New Jersey. At the time, he was on probation after conviction for illegal use of explosives. He violated his probation and is now a fugitive.

The assassination plot was worked out, our sources say, at a secret rendezvous near Bonao in the Dominican Republic. It was decided that a special shaped plastic charge was needed for the bombing.

The explosive was available on the streets of Miami, and the bomb materials were bought and fashioned in the United States, most sources believe.

However, one source told us the bomb was actually constructed in Chile.

It was later delivered to the Miami area by a Chilean military official carrying a diplomatic passport and flying in a military airplane, the source said. The device was transmitted to a member of Brigade 2506, we are told. He then carried it to New Jersey where the assassination team was waiting for it. They used the bomb, according to our sources, to kill Letelier.

The Justice Dept. had no formal comment on the case. We have learned that prosecutors, however, are trying to figure how to get testimony from Chileans with diplomatic immunity and how to extradite potential defendants from Chile.

Footnote: The Chilean government has repeatedly denied any involvement with the assassination. Spokesmen for Brigade 2506 also have sworn that their members had nothing to do with murdering Letelier. Incidentally, Chile has announced the dissolution of DINA. But our sources say its duties simply have been taken over by other organizations.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Graciela Olivarez is raising hackles inside the Community Services Administration. This is the agency that has taken over the work of the Poverty Corps. Not long after she took command of the new agency, she called the staff together not to outline programs to help the poor but to complain about coffee stains on the floor and waste paper in the ladies' rooms.

— President Carter has earmarked $4 billion to create 600,000 temporary jobs. Yet a tiny office inside the Commerce Dept. has helped create more than one million permanent jobs in the United States on a meager $100,000 budget. This two-man office runs the Invest in USA program, which has persuaded several foreign manufacturers to set up plants in this country.

— Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., leader of the congressional black caucus, called on President Carter last week to complain about high unemployment among blacks. Inside the oval office, Mitchell told the president to his face: "Mr. President, when you're right, I'll praise you and stand by you. But when you're wrong, I'll fight you all the way." The president flashed his famous smile. "Congressman," he said, "you've been doing that already."

— President Carter's embattled budget director, Bert Lance, has been so busy defending himself that he seldom shows up any more at the senior staff meetings. At press time, he hadn't put in an appearance at a staff meeting in more than two weeks. He has been represented instead by his deputy director, 36-year-old James McIntyre, who also has strong Georgia credentials. He's a native of Vidalia, Ga., and a 1963 graduate of the University of Georgia law school.

Jesse Jackson's challenge

If the appropriate slogan of the Martin Luther King crusades was "We shall overcome!" —

The best thing his heir, Jesse Jackson, could do for black people would be to challenge them properly to use their new opportunities: "We shall measure up!"

This last summer, the job market for school-agers was never better. The Labor Department reports employment of 16-to-21-year-olds at a record high — 15 million plus.

At the same time, record numbers of black schoolagers were unemployed — 34.8 percent in July. Unemployed while jobs were going begging.

The number of help-wanted ads in newspapers has just increased for the 25th consecutive month.

Farmers are so desperate for harvest hands that they are pleading with the Labor Department to allow the importation of foreign farm workers.

In the cities, cab companies are going broke because they can't get enough drivers, and domestic household help is unavailable at any price.

The easy out is to blame the unemployed for being shiftless and lazy — preferring welfare to work.

I'm unconvinced it is entirely their fault but, at any event, harping on the problem is not contributing to a solution.

For two generations, politicians have been buying public office with promises of more something-for-nothing. For two generations, welfare recipients have learned that it pays to be poor.

When a poor family can live in a public housing project in Chicago, collecting food stamps, ADC, welfare and whatall — an equivalent income of $16,000 a year tax free — they naturally will not seek jobs cooking, cleaning, cabdriving or apple-picking.

When Chicago's Jesse Jackson first opened an office in Washington, he raised hopes that he might become a black Moses for his people.

He began urging black students to stay off dope, stay out of jail, to prepare themselves with good grades for good jobs.

He tried to shame and scold and cajole and encourage young blacks to clean up, shape up, prove themselves.

But now he is back to criticizing the government for not doing more to "provide jobs."

The jobs are there. The jobs are going begging. It is the incentive to work which is missing. And the more government "provides," the less incentive will remain.

If parents have lost their grip — if politicians are intimidated — if the pundits have nothing to offer blacks but more self-pity — the urgent need for somebody with the eloquence of a Jesse Jackson and the stomach of a top sergeant to get these kids off the pity-pot and on their feet!

Just in jest

Make conservation financially attractive and you'll find any number of loyal conservationists doing their utmost to be cooperative. — In many restaurants drinking water is now served only on request. Think of the glass-washing that saves! I am also told that some bars are cutting down on the number of ice cubes they put in their customers' drinks. A small saving, but then, as the old saying goes, a penny saved is a penny earned. — In the meantime, however, since it would cost us several bucks to replace the old shower head with one that cuts the water flow in half, how many of us have bothered to make that simple change?

Retiring Post had his faults

By Earl Waters

The retirement of the Legislature's analyst, A. Alan Post, has prompted many well deserved plaudits for his high standard of performance during a reign of more than a quarter century. In fairness to his successor, whose job will be difficult enough without having to live with a legend, it should be pointed out that Post was no superbeing now deserving of sainthood.

That is not to deny his good qualities which are considerable. Among them is honesty, intelligence, dedication and a particular affinity to the career he chose.

Post was hired by the first man to occupy the job, then called the Legislative Auditor, Rolland A. Vandegrift, a tough talking fiscal conservative whom he succeeded when death overtook Vandegrift some four years later. Initially a Republican, Post retreated to being an "independent" voter by registration soon afterwards and was a non-participant in partisan politics thereafter.

Although in many ways he was unassuming, there was in his makeup a tendency to positiveness which occasionally warped his perspective. Also, he didn't contend that he didn't make mistakes, he was at times hard to convince that he had in fact erred, even to the point of being a bit testy about it. And, while he endeavored to walk a straight non-partisan path in his work, there were times when he would bend to the wind although perhaps not so much as to impeach his integrity.

This was, of course, understandable. Post was not so lofty as not to know on which side his bread was buttered.

He held the office at the pleasure of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee. It was controlled by the majority party which has shifted back and fourth between Republicans and Democrats throughout the years Post served.

Tenure in such a job, which permits the holder to make recommendations on every aspect of government and on legislative proposals, depends upon an ability to recognize political realities.

It was one of those shifts which nearly ended Post's tenure. That was when Democratic Sen. George Miller Jr. became committee chairman.

During his 14 years legislative service up to that time, Miller had developed some bitter criticisms of Post. But Post adeptly adjusted to the new order and weathered that storm as he did the many other changes both in partisan control as well as philosophical views which have occurred during his years.

While his accumulated experience has been of great value to the Legislature and to the state, the position of near unassailability which he attained during the past decade represents a dangerous threat to good government.

It got to the point where to speak against Post was as speaking against God or motherhood. Even the members of the Legislature feared to criticize him publicly.

Fortunately, Post was not a J. Edgar Hoover type and did not attempt to exercise power in such fashion. But no one should become so awesome that critics fear to speak out.

Legislation is a give and take system where opposition is healthy for it contributes to better solutions by bringing all views to the front. Post's job was to oppose the administration but it shouldn't make him immune from criticism. There is nothing absolute about politics and government is anything but an exact science.

Post's successor should not walk in awe at what has gone before. Neither should the Legislature permit him to become all powerful.

Ann Landers

Don't take a bite lying down

Dear Ann Landers: My boyfriend, Buzzy, is a sweet guy, but now and then I see signs of a terrible temper.

Last Friday night when we were horsing around on the floor, I got a toe-hold on him. (I learned it from watching wrestling on TV.) I think he went a little crazy, Ann. The guy actually bit me on the hand. I don't mean just a nibble, I mean a real bite that broke the skin. When I saw the blood I nearly fainted.

Buzzy said he was sorry, that he lost his head, and promised never to do such a thing again. I forgave him. The next day my mother saw the teethmarks and asked what happened. I was going to put the blame of Tuffy (our dog), but decided I'd better tell the truth. When I told Mom Buzzy bit me she was horrified — said a human bite can be very dangerous. Is this true? So far I'm O.K. Please tell me if Mom is right. — Nipped By Nick

Dear Nipped: Yes, she is right. You were lucky. Every human mouth is loaded with bacteria. You could have gotten a bad infection.

If that clown ever bites you again, wash the wound with soap and water, see a doctor promptly, and send Buzzy for a long walk on a short dock.

Dear Ann: I was ticked off by the letter from the office worker who complained because a personal letter was opened by someone in the mail room.

You can see from this stationery I am the president of a well-known company. I do not pay the mail room girl a salary to deliver personal letters to my employes. Nor do I pay my employes to read their personal mail on my time. Moreover, my employes have no right to use my typewriters and writing paper to carry on personal correspondence.

I'll bet you'll hear a lot on this subject from bosses all over the country and they will all be on my side. — Third Eye

Dear Eye: You were right. I did — and they were. What's more, as an employer, I must say you have a point. Read on if you want to know what the postal authorities in Chicago had to say on the subject.

All mail addressed to a business (regardless of whether or not it is marked "personal" is delivered according to the instructions issued by the head of the business — unless it is registered mail.

If the boss says all mail delivered to the mail room is to be opened, so be it "Personal And Confidential" has no legal significance. This does not mean, however, that the boss has the right to open letters addressed to others. The directive applies only to the letter-opener in the mail room.

Dear Ann Landers: In one of your replies recently you asked, "Where are the State Police?" Well, they were probably on the highway doing their job, but with all the "ratters" on C.B.'s they don't stand a chance of catching many speeders.

Those C.B.'ers are forever warning each other to look out for the "County Mountie," "City Kitty," "Smokey Bear" or "Picture Taker."

From the way you answered that letter, I have a hunch you are a good driver. And when you gave your handle as "Lincoln Land Annie Baby" I just knew you were a C.B.'er of long Standing. How about the lowdown? — Green Eyed Luke From Creaky Canyon

Dear Creak: Wrong on both counts. I quit driving 20 years ago as my contribution to the pedestrians of Chicago. That "handle" was one I made up at the typewriter.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Elvis from the belt buckle up

Argument continues over which national TV show Elvis Presley first appeared on. Wasn't Ed Sullivan's program contrary to widespread belief. Sullivan vowed he wouldn't have that "sneering squirming kid" on his stage. But Steve Allen, emceeing a rival show opposite Ed's, invited Elvis there. And for the first time, Steve topped Sullivan in the ratings. Ed sent Allen a congratulatory telegram which read: "You rat." And Elvis then was asked onto the Ed Sullivan Show. That performance infuriated numerous Elvis devotees. The cameras only focused on him from the belt buckle up.

TOWHEADS

Q. "Why do we refer to blond kids as 'towheads'?"

A. The "tow" comes from "taw" which once was another word for any tuft of flax, hemp or short fiber, usually light colored.

Q. "What did Lee Majors do before he took up acting in 'The Big Valley' and then 'The $6 Million Man'?"

A. He was a playground instructor.

Q. "Has the weather ever got so hot that popcorn popped on the stalk?"

A. At least once, if the record is right. News reports indicate it happened in Brownstone, Ind., in the summer of 1936.

Naturalists say their scientific studies indicate it takes a pair of lions in the wild approximately 1,500 matings on the average to produce a litter of cubs.

Do you know what happens to all the U.S. government's cashed paychecks? They're recycled into bathroom tissue.

LADY GODIVA

Fiercely female archivists in Great Britain now contend Lady Godiva did not ride nude through the streets of Coventry 900-odd years ago, but rode that white horse "stripped only of all signs of her rank." And there was no Tom the Tailor, who peeped, and then went blind, they aver. I do not chose to believe them.

The average American hog now is not only 250 pounds lighter than it was 30 years ago, but it's livelier, cleaner and smarter, too. And it's also more inquisitive and more aggressive, thus obviously capable of producing better bacon.

If you get the feeling sometimes that you can't keep up with the rat race, sir, you must be slowing down considerably. Top speed of the rat is only about 5 m.p.h.

You can't be a licensed hairdresser in Colorado without 1,550 hours of general instruction plus 100 hours of supervised shampoo lessons.

Dr. Miller

Guinea pig seems neurotic

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chico seems neurotic. Can a male Peruvian guinea pig, two years old, find happiness alone? — M.B.

DEAR M.B.: Chico could be happy, or he could be neurotic, or he could be happy and neurotic. Being completely sane may not be all that beneficial for a lonesome little pig . . .

DEAR DR. MILLER: We suddenly find ourselves suffering a confidence crisis over our veterinarian. We're very fond of him — he's saved our dogs and cats many times — but my son swears he just told him that dogs can't get mange from other dogs.

I personally know this is not true since, years ago, I had a cocker spaniel who picked up a case of mange from a neighbor's dog and we had to give him baths in a stinking sulphur soap to get rid of it. Truly, how can we continue to have confidence in our veterinarian when he made such a statement? — A.T.

DEAR A.T.: A quick call to your own veterinarian could have solved your dilemma in short order. Demodectic mange (in years past called red mange) is caused by a mange mite which is transmitted from the bitch to her offspring. Only the newborn, or very young puppies, are susceptible. Older puppies and adult dogs cannot pick up this demodectic mange either from their mother or from any other dog. This was undoubtedly the type of mange your veterinarian was referring to. Other types of mange may be, and are, transmitted from one dog to another, be they puppies or mature.

The most common example of the type of mange easily transmitted from one dog to another, and occasionally from dogs to humans, is sarcoptic mange. This mange mite succumbs to sulphur and the old rotten-egg-odored sulphur baths are the standard treatment for this type of mange. (Incidentally, those sulphur baths are not a satisfactory treatment for the demodectic mange).

DEAR DR. MILLER: Should Terry and Toodles, my parakeets, be getting vitamins? They've never seemed to need them, but I just bought a bottle of vitamin drops for them on impulse. Should I use them? — H.E.

DEAR H.E.: Vitamins for the birds? Why not? They may just fill in a necessary niche or two. Birds can often benefit from dietary improvement. Remember, though, vitamins don't take the place of a high-quality, properly-presented, balanced diet.

What part(s) do you play?

Does Jimmy Carter like being President? Does he like being Billy's brother? Is he happy about the Panama Canal? Can he take care of Amy AND run the country?

In the olden times, when the world was young, O best beloved, the civilized countries stood awe-struck at what was variously known as "a man of parts" or "the Renaissance man," a chap who had many interests and was good at all of them.

Today YOU are the Renaissance man. (Take a bow, Renny!)

The average American goes to work at some sort of a job to earn some sort of a living wage. He puts in his hours, more or less, and returns home suddenly (SUDDENLY?) husband, father, psychologist, financier, teacher, preacher, plumber, electrician, gardener and possibly second-baseman on the local sandlot team. How Renaissance can you get?

The trouble is (a bad way to start a sentence) that none of these diverse interests and activities can ever be completely separated, right? You (sales manager) sit at your desk planning a campaign while you (father) worry about the braces on little Anastasia's teeth, and you (sports fan) debate the outcome of the football season, and you (— —) recall the fragrance of that blonde's perfume at the party last night.

Maybe you botch a job on your drill press and the boss chews you out. He is talking to a man who a) had a fight with his wife that morning; b) threw a rod on the way to work, and c) got his tax bill and an overdrawn notice from the bank in the same mail. A complex and volatile bomb.

This is not to stress the gloomy side of the picture too much. Perhaps you are doing well on your job, only slightly distracted by the fact that after work you must pick up your shirts at the laundry, take Sally to her dancing lesson, teach Junior how to drive, and repair the lawn mower. And don't forget the Barkers want us over for a drink at 5.

The whole situation of you, complex man, in society, is infinitely compounded by the fact that everyone you come into contact with during the day is also complex man with his infinite problems and concerns. The grocery store checker has a sick husband and sore feet. The policeman writing you a ticket has been having a fight with the desk sergeant and his son is threatening to drop out of high school. The man you are trying to sell insurance to has a toothache and can't do the New Math. Your waitress has a date with a real cute feller tonight and can't wait till quitting time.

It would be great if we all had little compartments in our mind and/or consciousness which we could open and shut at will, so we would be completely one thing at a time — salesman and prospect, worker and boss, teacher and student, cowboy and Indian, etc. Alas, as they used to say in the olden tymes. We must go on playing our various roles and doing our best to sort them out and perform them at the rignt time.

"All the world's a stage," Shakespeare said. "One man in his time plays many parts."

He didn't warn us that we had to play them all at the same time.

Garlic and blood pressure

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have high blood pressure. I am taking medicine for it. If you take garlic pills or eat fresh garlic will your blood pressure go down? I've had so many people tell me this. When I go to the hospital my blood pressure is normal. My blood pressure is 162 over 98 and I am 56. Is that too high?

DEAR READER — The only way garlic helps blood pressure is if people make you nervous and raise your pressure. The garlic will help you avoid people. Seriously, there is no truth in the often repeated claim that garlic helps lower blood pressure.

If by going to the hospital you mean staying in bed in the hospital, it is true that when a person with mildly elevated pressure is put at bed rest the pressure often falls.

Why? Because the bed rest results in flushing out salt (sodium) and water from the body tissues. These people often get similar results from taking one of the diuretics commonly used in the treatment of mildly elevated blood pressure.

Your pressure is not high enough to cause anyone to be disturbed about it or to give you strong medicines but it is abnormal if it persists at those levels. If it is that high only part of the time when you are tense it might not be so important.

For mild high blood pressure the first and most important thing to do is eliminate any extra fat stores you can from your body by a sensible diet and mild exercise program such as walking.

If weight control does not result in decreasing the pressure enough then the doctor may want to use one of the diuretics. That is usually sufficient in mild cases. If high pressure persists he may want to use other medicines.

Anyone who has elevated blood pressure should eliminate stimulants — especially coffee, tea, and colas, and try to avoid stressful situations.

To give you more information on blood pressure I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For some months now I've been goofy over Bromo-Seltzer. I take three or four glasses a day and have been wondering if it does any harm. I often use it as a pop.

DEAR READER — It makes a difference how much powder you put in each glass. The truth is that if a person takes a lot of bromide from any source — and Bromo-Seltzer contains potassium bromide — over a period of time they run the risk of bromide poisoning.

It may cause drowsiness, neurological and emotional disturbances, a rash and other more serious effects.

I doubt you will have this problem if you limit your use of it, but regular use in large amounts should be avoided. Why don't you switch to one of the carbonated soda drinks such as Tom Collins mix or vodka mixer that contains some fruit juices for flavoring and a little fizz which you might enjoy. The mix is not harmful. It is what most people put into the mix that causes the problems.

Jim: "We get so many letters about the Blackwood convention that we really ought to devote some more articles to slam bidding and the proper use of this fine convention."

Oswald: "Here is an example of its abuse. A Canadian reader wanted to know how he could have reached the lay down six-spade contract. His bidding is shown in the box."

Jim: "North violated the first rule for when not to use Blackwood. You just should not use Blackwood when you have a worthless doubleton in any suit not bid by your partner."

Oswald: "The scientific bidders would start with a three-diamond bid by North. South would rebid three spades, North four clubs and South six clubs. He would like his clubs and his singleton heart whereupon North would close the bidding at six spades."

Jim: "There is also a fairly simple, but elegant way to get to six. North bids five spades right away. This bid asks partner to cue bid if he can take the first heart, to bid six spades if he can take the second one and to pass if he is looking at two quick heart losers."

There is no such rule, but the practice is somewhat objectionable. In addition, dummy loses all sorts of potentially valuable rights by looking at his partner's hand.

Sometimes it seems like a bother to use soap when you wash. But soap really does make you cleaner than plain water does.

Water cannot penetrate grease and dirt by itself. Water alone merely stands on grease or rolls off.

When you wash your hands with soap and water, the soap helps wash away the dirt by lowering the water's surface tension.

The soap particles gather at the water's surface and force the water to spread out, making the water wetter (this same action helps form bubbles and suds).

With surface tension reduced, water can penetrate into the small hollows and valleys of your skin more completely to loosen the dirt.

Besides making the water wetter, the soap breaks up the grease and dirt particles and "pulls" them away from your skin.

Then the soap holds dirt particles in the water so that they can be rinsed away, leaving your skin clean.

Dodgers try to clinch flag at home

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers, with their magic number still holding at eight, open a seven-game homestand tonight (7:30 p.m.) with the San Diego Padres providing the opposition.

Don Sutton (13-8) has been moved up one night in the rotation to replace Burt Hooton who has a tender elbow. Dave Friesleben (7-7) will start for the Padres.

If Hooton (10-7) can't make it Tuesday, the pitchers will be Dennis Lewallyn (1-0) vs. Bob Shirley (9-17).

Sunday's 6-2 loss to the Reds in Cincinnati leaves the Dodgers with an 11½ game lead, an 8-8 record against the Reds this season, a 4-3 mark for the road trip and a 7-3 ledger for Sept.

"Well, we gained two more days anyway," said manager Tommy Lasorda sourly. "That's what you say when you lose two straight to a team don't you?

"You tell people you lost ground but gained days."

You're still 11½ ahead and you could only be 9½, suggested a helpful writer.

"Yeah and we could be 15½," retorted Lasorda.

When are you going to clinch it, another asked.

"As fast as we bleeping can," bleeped Lasorda who readily admits to being a sore loser. "What kind of a question is that? If I knew the answer to that, I'd stay home until then."

Then the Dodger manager turned his attention to the upcoming homestand trying to figure out the pitching the Dodgers will face when the Reds come to town Wednesday and Thursday.

Since both clubs are in a five-man rotation, it figures to be a pair of rematches between Tommy John and Fredie Norman Wednesday night and Doug Rau and Tom Seaver Thursday.

That is, if both managers follow the rotation they have been using. Reds' manager Sparky Anderson Saturday told writers traveling with the Dodgers that he wouldn't waste either Norman or Seaver against "T.J."

"Tommy's convinced me," said Anderson. "It's foolish to waste my best pitchers when he's going against us. I'm better off using one of the kids."

Mario Soto and Paul Moskau are pitching tonight and Tuesday against Houston. Doug Capilla has a bad back and is is not known when he can return to action.

However, Capilla was extremely impressive against the Lasorda men in Los Angeles August 9.

"Well, whoever it is, he'll be pitching in our ballpark," said Lasorda searching for something positive. "I'm proud of what my guys have done this year.

"Who would have thought we'd be 11½ games ahead of this club (the Reds) at this time? That's a hell of a ballclub they have here in Cincinnati."

It was just as well Lasorda turned his attention away from Sunday's game. The Dodgers were anything but impressive.

Rick Rhoden (16-8) gave up four runs on three hits, two walks and a wild pitch in the first inning. One of the hits was Johnny Bench's 33rd double driving in his 99th and 100th runs of the season.

Bench now has topped the century mark in ribbies six times. The husky catcher has hit safely in eight straight games and has 27 hits in his last 76 at-bats (.355).

Rhoden was no puzzle this particular Sunday afternoon. He departed after allowing five runs and eight hits in six innings.

Although the Dodgers got nine hits, they couldn't put them together and left eight runners stranded for a total of 51 left on base during the seven-game trip.

They had starter Jack Billingham on the ropes with the bases loaded and one out in the second inning. But Steve Yeager grounded into a double play.

They did knock Billingham out in the third when Rhoden's single, a walk to Davey Lopes and a hit batter (Bill Russell) loaded the bases with no outs.

That brought in Tom Hume who got Reggie Smith to pop out. Ron Cey's sacrifice fly scored Rhoden and Lopes came in on Steve Garvey's single.

But Rick Monday was allowed to swing at a 3-0 pitch and tapped into an inning-ending force out.

"I gave him (Monday) the hit sign because I know he can hit," said Lasorda defending his strategy. "Rick strikes out a lot, so if you make him take a pitch, you take away one-third of his hitting. If it had been a guy that makes contact, it would have been a different matter."

You must remember Lasorda was a pitcher not a hitter. Tommy apparently subscribes to an odd theory that you let hitters who miss the ball swing at it and hitters that make contact take pitches!

Garvey ran the Dodgers out of a possible scoring stanza in the Dodger sixth. With one out, Steve lined a single to left and foolishly tried to stretch it to a double.

He was out by the proverbial mile.

And then there was the humiliation of being beaten by Hume (1-3). In notching his first major league victory, the rookie righthander held the Dodgers scoreless the last seven innings.

• Hume carried a 10.24 earned run average into the contest!

DODGER DATA — With a crowd of 44,694 Sunday, the Dodgers and Reds drew a total of 133,421 for the three games bringing the Reds' season total to 2,375,999.

All told, 702,942 have turned out in Los Angeles and Cincinnati to see the two play each other in 15 dates (16 games). That's an average of 46,863 per date.

The Dodgers won five of the nine games played in Cincinnati between the two clubs. But the Reds hold a 4-3 advantage at Dodger Stadium.

Dusty Baker, who went 0-for-3 Sunday, had an 11-game hitting streak snapped.

Tommy John says he's faster now than he was before he had surgery on his arm.

"I was under the bubble so to speak," John says, "with everyone watching me to see how I threw. I kept throwing or trying to throw hard all the time I was recovering. I think I have more zip now than I had before it (the injury) happened."

THE NEW CHAMP

Argentina's Guillermo Vilas holds his newly-won U.S. Open Tennis Championship trophy on his head at Forest Hills, N.Y. Sunday night after beating Jimmy Connors in the finals.

Vilas quite happy with self

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Guillermo Vilas is No. 1 today, a proud, self-satisfied young man.

"I'm very happy with myself," he said. "I'm a very good friend of myself."

His critics had said his scorching clay court victory streak of 45 matches was not as meaningful as it seemed because it included no matches against the giants of the game of tennis, Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors.

But Sunday, the 25-year-old Argentine with the extreme topspin backhand, outplayed Connors 2-6, 6-3, 7-6, 6-0 in the $462.420 U.S. Open championships. He hasn't had a crack yet at Borg, who had to default during this tournament because of a strained shoulder.

"This puts me very, very happy for sure," the brighteyed and exuberant Vilas said after being mobbed by adoring fans at the West Side Tennis Club. The crowd had decided the match was over before the umpire did, streaming onto the court as soon as the linesman called a Connors forehand long.

Saturday, the glory was Chris Evert's, as she outfought surprising Wendy Turnbull of Australia 7-6, 6-2 for her third consecutive U.S. Open title. It was roses for both the finalists, but the Open victory was particularly sweet for Miss Evert after her loss in the Wimbledon semifinal to Virginia Wade.

Prize money for each of the winners was $33,000, with $16,500 apiece to Connors and Miss Turnbull.

Vilas, blocked by his admirers and hoisted atop their shoulders, never congratulated Connors, who stormed away from the stadium with his mother and entourage. "I will apologize when I see him," Vilas said. "I wanted to shake his hand."

"He is a great player," he said of Connors. "I have a lot of respect for him. I think he played fair. I had nothing to lose. I knew the pressure was on him since he had not won a major title (this year) and this was his last chance."

Winds gusting up to 20 miles per hour swept over the court, blowing great clouds of dust on them from the synthetic clay like Har-Tru surface. "The wind was very strange," Vilas said of his losing first set. "He was hitting rockets."

But in the second set, as Vilas became more certain, coming in on more balls, Connors grew slightly tentative, and the Argentine was able to break him in the eighth game for 5-3. Vilas, the No. 4 seed, drew a roaring standing ovation as he took the next game with a backhand passing shot.

The third set went to 5-5 and each broke the other's service at love, forcing a tie-breaker. It was reminiscent of the third-set situation Connors faced last year in the final against Borg. But last year, Connors outlasted Borg 11-9 in the tiebreaker and went on to victory.

The tie-breaker went to 3-3, then Vilas moved up to the net for a forehand volley winner. Connors netted a forehand, then Vilas hit one wide, making it 5-4. Vilas hit a forehand to the baseline for 6-4 and won on a swift forehand passing shot.

That gave Vilas extreme confidence. He then broke service in the second game of the fourth set with a crosscourt backhand that touched the sideline, broke again in the fourth when Connors' forehand volley hit the net, then kept his serve, pummeling Connors at love for 5-0.

In the final game, the two were playing the second deuce, forced when Connors doublefaulted. Vilas took the advantage when the struggling Connors hit his forehand approach into the net. Their final rally had just begun when Connors hit his forehand too long.

The linesman saw it that way. Vilas thought he had. Connors stood and stared. Vilas' coach, Ion Tiriac, stood at his courtside seat and looked stern as a bull. The umpire said nothing. But the crowd had decided. The umpire made it official several moments later.

For Miss Evert, her final was the toughest match of the tournament. She had been asking for it all week, complaining politely that she wasn't getting enough competition.

Miss Turnbull provided it with the scurrying game that has given her the name "rabbit" among her World Team Tennis colleagues on the Cleveland Nets.

"She made me play my very best," Miss Evert said. "She played very well and she now can be considered one of the best players in the world."

Despite the loss, Miss Turnbull, seeded 12th, received the recognition that had long avoided her. She beat Ms. Wade and second-seeded Martina Navratilova en route to the final.

The first-set tie-breaker came after 12 games of steady rallies of ground strokes, and Miss Evert won it 7-3.

"Then I let her break me in the first game of the second set and she ran away with it," Miss Turnbull said. "It is really tough to play Chrissie on clay and I think I played very well. I'm really not disappointed."

Even as a loser, Miss Turnbull advanced further than she ever had in a major tournament.

Miss Evert seemed undisturbed by a pinched nerve in her left shoulder, saying it hurt only on the toss for her serve. She said she hadn't seen a doctor yet because she was superstitious.

"If I'm going to get it amputated, I don't want to know about it until after the tournament," Miss Evert joked.

The victory was Miss Evert's 113th straight on clay. "I'm very proud of that statistic," she said.

For seasoned players like Miss Evert, the tournament was a little sad. If all goes according to plan, they never again will play in the famed old horseshoe stadium at the West Side Tennis Club. The U.S. Tennis Association has announced plans to hold the Open in a bigger, new facility in nearby Flushing Meadow. Over the weekend, the USTA announced it had dropped discussions with the West Side Tennis Club over an option to hold the Open here next year in case construction isn't completed at the new site.

Cougars point towards UCLA

HOUSTON (AP) — Starting running back Alois Blackwell says the Houston Cougars, with the best turnaround record in the nation last year, now have two seasons to play.

The first season — the non-conference schedule — begins tonight when the defending Southwest Conference co-champion Cougars host the UCLA Bruins in the Astrodome before a national television audience.

When the Cougars finish with the Bruins tonight, they return to the field Saturday against Penn State.

"We've got a chance to be No. 1 in the nation if we beat UCLA and Penn State," said Blackwell, the outstanding offensive player in Houston's Cotton Bowl victory last January. "But our season won't be over if we lose early. We still have a shot at the conference title and the Cotton Bowl."

There was no such consolation prize for Houston prior to last season. The Cougars spent their final year of independence struggling to a 2-8 record in 1975 but shocked the SWC last year with a 10-2 record and a Cotton Bowl championship.

Houston's chances of repeating as SWC champions may well depend on plugging up a graduation, defection, injury riddled defense. Houston lost four defensive starters, including All-American tackle Wilson Whitley, to graduation.

Linebacker David Hodge, expected to anchor the defense, quit the team and starting nose guard Robert Oglesby and his backup Harry Wright are out with leg injuries. The nose guard position will be manned tonight by Robert Harrison, who's had five days practice at his new position.

"You don't go anywhere but the bathroom without defense," Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said. "We simply must have outstanding performance from our defense for us to consider any success this season."

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue is playing out a different type of drama as he prepares an encore for his first season as Bruin head coach, a 9-2-1 season. Donahue must decide between Steve Bukich and Rich Bashore as his starting quarterback for tonight's season opener.

Try as he might, Donahue says he won't be able to make a decision until today. Bukich, a husky 215-pounder, was backup to Jeff Dankworth last season but Bashore finished spring training in a dead heat for the starting nod.

Even after Donahue decides on a starting quarterback, he still has only three returning offensive starters from last season.

"Our defense is going to have to carry us for the early part of the season," Donahue said.

The Bruins aren't without offensive weapons, however. They'll open at running backs with 1,000-yard rusher Theotis Brown and Olympic hurdler James Owens.

The defense Donahue is counting on so heavily is anchored by linebacker Jerry Robinson, tackle Manu Tuiasosopo and cornerback Levi Armstrong and with a little Texas flavor by Billy Don Jackson, a freshman from Sherman.

Jackson already has captured the hearts of touring Pacific Eight Conference writers, who named him rookie of the year before he has played his first collegiate game.

SGV Saints fall

WEST COVINA — The Long Beach Mustangs clinched the Southern Division title of the California Football League Sunday with a 16-7 win over the San Gabriel Valley Saints in a game played at West Covina High.

The Saints will finish their regular season Sunday at 2 p.m. at West Covina High when they meet the Southern California Rhinos for second place in the Southern Division.

'Bart' will start

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Falcons' quarterback Steve Bartkowski says he will be in the starting lineup Sunday when the Los Angeles Rams invade Atlanta Stadium for the start of the National Football League season, despite suffering a recurrence of a knee injury in the final exhibition game.

Bartkowski was forced out of Sunday's 29-10 loss to the New England Patriots when his right knee buckled on him twice.

The Falcons' No. 1 draft choice in 1974, who missed eight games last season when his knee had to be operated on, has been playing with a specially designed brace.

The brace, similar to one worn by Los Angeles quarterback Joe Namath, was to prevent slippage in the knee after Bartkowski felt something pop in it two weeks ago.

Sunday, it popped twice, forcing the 6-foot-4, 215-pound quarterback to the sidelines twice, the second time for good where an ice pack was applied.

"I'd rather talk about something else," said Bartkowski, who tossed a 63-yard touchdown pass to Alfred Jenkins just before his departure.

Bartkowski said during the game he felt his knee go out on him twice. Falcon team doctors said slippage in the knee was the only problem and indicated an adjustment on the brace should help.

McHargue wins four

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Dancing Femme and Darrel McHargue enjoyed great success before a crowd of 17,670 at Del Mar Sunday, but it wasn't a memorable day for Marcelino Olguin.

Dancing Femme led all the way in scoring her fifth straight victory, a 1¼ length triumph in the $59,650 Ramona Handicap.

The victory was the fourth of the day for McHargue, who now has ridden 44 winners to 49 for Laffit Pincay, leading jockey of the Del Mar meeting.

Dancing Femme, carrying high weight of 122 pounds, covered 1⅛ miles on turf in 1:48 2-5 and paid $6.80, $4.60 and $3. Up to Juliet, a 24-to-1 shot ridden by A.L. Diaz, finished second and returned $17.60 and $6.80. Swingtime, with Fernando Toro aboard, paid $2.60 to show.

There were 11 entries in the event for older fillies and mares.

Apprentice jockey Olguin suffered fractured ribs on the right side when he was injured in a first race spill.

Olguin, 18, who has ridden 23 winners at Del Mar this season, was taken to Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla, where he'll remain hospitalized for observation the next few days.

Olguin was injured when his mount, Mayaguez, clipped a horse's heels on the backstretch, stumbled and fell.

Favored Kulak, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, won the $27,450 El Cajon Stakes by three-quarters of a length Saturday. Kulak covered 1 1-16 miles in 1:41 1-5 and paid $6, $4.20 and $3.20. Centennial Pride was second and returned $4.80 and $4.20. Alpha Boy paid $3.20 to show.

Angels put Chisox on a 'diet'

ANAHEIM (AP) — Manager Bob Lemon of the Chicago White Sox has a recommendation for overweight Americans interested in shedding their excess poundage.

Lemon's White Sox split a doubleheader with the California Angels Sunday, winning the first game 6-2 on a four-hitter by Chris Knapp and losing a 5-4 decision in the second game on a succession of bad-hop grounders and fly balls that dropped out of outfielders' gloves.

Chicago made 14 errors in losing four of the six games played against the Angels during the past four days.

Lemon approached Angels' broadcaster Don Drysdale at the end of Sunday's doubleheader.

"Want to know how to lose weight?" Lemon asked Drysdale.

The former Dodgers' pitching star was interested.

"Try managing," advised Lemon.

Knapp struck out 13 Angels in the opener and had a no-hitter working until Rance Mulliniks lined a clean single with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Jorge Orta paced the White Sox with four runs-batted-in, three on a bases-loaded double in the top of the seventh.

Chicago had a 4-2 lead entering the bottom of the seventh inning of the nightcap. What followed illustrated what Lemon was talking about.

With one out, Dave Chalk hit a fly ball to right-center field. After a long run, Oscar Gamble got a glove on the ball, but it squirted out for a double.

Silverio Martinez replaced Dave Hamilton on the mound for the White Sox and walked Ron Jackson. Martinez struck out Thad Bosley for the second out.

Pinch-hitter Gil Flores then hit a grounder toward shortstop Don Kessinger, but the ball took a bad hop, bouncing high over Kessinger's head for a double. Chalk scored on the play, making it 4-3.

Mulliniks followed with another grounder toward Kessinger, which eluded the shortstop's grasp, allowing Jackson to score the tying run.

There was more in the eight inning. Bobby Bonds opened with a walk. Bonds stole second and reached third when catcher Brian Downing's throw hit Bonds for the White Sox' sixth error of the afternoon.

Mario Guerrero followed with a double to left-center, driving in the inning run. The ball hit Chet Lemon's glove and bounced out.

The Angels open an eightgame trip tonight at Texas. Nolan Ryan, 19-13, will attempt to become the American League's first 20-game winner against Dock Ellis, 8-12.

The White Sox returned to Chicago following Sunday's games. They play the Minnesota Twins tonight.

Schmidt sets javelin mark

FUERTH, West Germany — Kathy Schmidt of Los Angeles set a world record in the women's javelin with a toss of 227 feet, 5 inches during an international track and field meet. The throw shattered the record of 226-9 set by Olympic gold medalist Ruth Fuchs of East Germany.

Marathon record broken

EUGENE, Ore. — Kim Merritt of Racine, Wis., set a U.S. women's marathon record in the Nike Oregon Track Club Marathon on the course through the Oregon University campus and surrounding area. Miss Merritt covered the 26-mile, 385-yard course in 2 hours, 27 minutes, 19 seconds, shattering the record of 2:38.19 set by Jackie Hansen of San Fernando Valley, Calif., last year in Eugene.

Morgan wins B.C. Open

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Dr. Gil Morgan, a doctor of optometry from Wewoka, Okla., scored his first professional golf victory in capturing the $200,000 B.C. Open with a final-round two-under-par 69. Dr. Morgan finished five strokes ahead of runner-up Lee Elder and his 72-hole total of 14-under-par 214 earned him a first place prize of $40,000.

Carner breaks slump

DENVER — Long-driving tour veteran JoAnne Carner broke out a two-month slump with a final round three-under-par 69 and won the $50,000 National Jewish Hospital Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament. Miss Carner, who hadn't finished higher than 16th since the LPGA Open in July, finished two-strokes ahead of Hollis Stacy, who won last week's LPGA tournament.

All-Pros leave Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. — John Hanna and Leon Gray, all-pro linemen for the New England Patriots, left the National Football League team in a contract dispute. Hanna, a guard, and Gray, a tackle, are seeking to extend their contracts and receive subtantial pay increases.

Andretti beats Lauda

MONZA, Italy — Mario Andretti scored his fourth victory of the year by guiding his Lotus to a 16.9-second victory over Niki Lauda of Austria in the Grand Prix of Italy Formula I race. Lauda's second place finish vitually clinched for him the 1977 World Driving championship. Lauda leads Jody Scheckter of South Africa by 27 points with only three world races remaining.

Bonnet scores first win

RICHMOND, Va. — Neil Bonnett beat back challenges by several veteran drivers in the last 100 laps and charged to his first Grand National stock car victory by capturing the Capital City 400 at the Fairgrounds Raceway. The young Dodge driver took the lead on the 301st lap and was never headed. Richard Petty finished a distant second and Bennie Parsons was third.

Gregg captures title

ST. JOVITE, Que. — Peter Gregg of Jacksonville, Fla., drove his Porsche 934 Turbo to victory in the 11th and final event of the 1977 Trans-Am season at Le Circuit St. Jovite to take the Category 2 drivers title.

NFL experts might be a little edgy

By Associated Press

The National Football League has completed its last six-game preseason with a few surprises that could be making the prognosticators a little edgy before the start of the regular season next Sunday.

The league has voted to drop two exhibition games and add two regular season games for a 16-4 split. In recent years, the schedule has called for 14 season contests and six exhibitions.

But in the last go-round of preseason games, there were some shocking results involving preseason favorites and some rumblings of discontent.

It all started Thursday night with Dallas' 30-0 lashing of American Conference powerhouse Pittsburgh and continued Saturday night with expansion Tampa Bay's 14-0 whitewashing of perennial playoff contender Baltimore.

On Sunday, the New England Patriots -- who some observers believe have the best chance to unseat the Oakland Raiders as Super Bowl champs — ran their preseason record to 5-1 with a 29-10 triumph over Atlanta. But the kingpins of their offensive line, Leon Gray and John Hannah, walked out on the team in a contract dispute before the game.

The two other games Sunday that closed out the preseason schedule saw the Miami Dolphins outscore the New York Giants 27-21 and San Diego outlast Seattle 38-20.

Minnesota bombed Buffalo 30-6, New Orleans edged Houston 20-16, Cincinnati crushed Chicago 24-6, Denver blanked San Francisco 20-0 and Kansas City outscored St. Louis 37-20 on Saturday.

Steve Grogan threw touchdown passes to Russ Francis and Darryl Stingley to pace the New England victory, but Coach Chuck Fairbanks was stung by the Hannah-Gray walkout.

"No club can lose two All-Pros without it hurting the team," he said. "You do your best with what you have."

Former tight end Pete Brock, who took over Hannah's guard slot Sunday, said, "I don't think it will create any dissension."

The two offensive linemen want to renegotiate their contracts, citing higher pay for others in the league of similar stature at their positions.

Team President William Sullivan said the two players "probably would get increases" if their contracts had expired. But he said he would not renegotiate.

Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, who only has three preseason victories in a total of 26 exhibition and regular-season games in the Buccaneers' existence, saw top draft choice Ricky Bell score both Tampa Bay touchdowns.

"They laughed before the game and now we're laughing," said McKay.

With victories Saturday, New Orleans, Denver and Cincinnati preceded New England in having the best preseason marks — 5-1.

The Saints got completions on 13 of 17 passes from Bobby Scott before he left the game against Houston with a sprained knee in the third period.

Why House of Windsor is Red Skelton's favorite cigar.

Red Skelton's tried some cigars that are more expensive than House of Windsor Palmas, but never one that's better.

The reason is that our Palmas are made from only the choicest imported filler tobaccos and then carefully wrapped in specially selected Honduran natural or candela leaf.

The result: quality and value rolled into one rich, smooth-smoking cigar. House of Windsor Palmas, shapely Sportsman or full-sized Panatelas— they've got the kind of taste that could make you forget you ever smoked anything else.

Look for this House of Windsor display at your tobacconist.
